GOP Opens Fierce Fight To Decrease 1950 Budget

Premature Battle Flares as Congress Awaits President's Estimates Today

Congressional Democrats and Republicans jumped the gun yesterday and opened a slam-bang battle over President Truman's new spending program before they officially learned any of its details.

At the same time, the incoming Senate Majority Leader, Scott Lucas, threw out a strong hint that Administration forces may seek to raise personal income taxes, instead of imposing an excess profits tax on corporations, to bring in the four billion dollars in extra revenue that Mr. Truman has requested.

The President's budget for fiscal 1950 will be laid before the House and Senate shortly after noon today. It is expected to call for Government outlays of about $41,900,000,000 in the year beginning July 1.

Tax Raise Asked

Mr. Truman already has said, in his State of the Union message last week, that his budget will call for four billion dollars in new taxes. But he indicated he will let Congress decide what kind of taxes.

Without waiting for exact figures, leaders of the GOP economy bloc charged that Mr. Truman's plans would drive the Nation headlong into "bankruptcy."

Among those raising the loudest cry were Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), former chairman of the House Appropriations Committee; Representative Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.), House Republican floor leader in the recent Congress; and Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.).

They promised a fierce fight to stall all the spending proposals.

Vital Programs Cited

But Lucas replied that the forthcoming budget cannot be trimmed to "any appreciable extent" without jeopardizing vital national defense and foreign aid programs. Those programs are expected to take up over half the total budget.

Lucas remarked that the amount of added funds the Government needs is just about the same as the amount it lost when the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress cut income taxes last year over Mr. Truman's veto.

Therefore, Lucas pointed out, Congress could take care of the tax problem by simply wiping out the GOP-sponsored reductions and putting income levies back to the old rates.

He did not, however, make an outright prediction that would be done.

Capehart asserted that the Government is taking in the maximum possible amount of revenue under present tax rates. He predicted that any increase in rates would cause business to slump so badly that actual Government receipts

Hoover Warns Against Amateur Spy Investigators

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has warned the Nation's law enforcement agencies to beware of volunteer amateur investigators in tracking down subversives.

In the current issue of the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin, he said that the over-zealous amateur, "untrained in the use of proper investigative techniques, may constitute a serious menace to civil rights."

Not only that, he said, "It is our opinion that subversive individuals would be in the vanguard of volunteers in any amateur organization."

"The work of the vigilante too often deserves the label 'witch hunt.' The work of the fifth columnists need no label," he said. "Let us beware of both."

GOP Senators Due 5 Spots On Committees

Assignment Set For Approval Today At 'Hill' Conference

Five political plums are due to fall today to five Republican Senators with more than two years' service.

They are the few major committee spots left open by controlling Democrats in upping their voting margins on key lawmaking groups.

In the House, Democrats still wrestled with the problem of fitting their huge majority into 18 committees. House Republicans will then complete their list.

It was learned the prized GOP assignments to Senate vacancies, subject to approval of the Republican conference, are:

Senator Hickenlooper (Iowa), Agriculture Committee, which handles all farm legislation.

Senator Knowland (Calif.), Armed Services, which considers all military legislation.

Senator Williams (Del.), Finance Committee, which writes tax legislation.

Senator Bricker (Ohio), Commerce Committee.

Senator Jenner (Ind.), Judiciary Committee, which may play a major role in antilynching and other civil rights legislation.

These and all other Republican assignments were made by a special GOP committee on committees headed by Senator Butler (Neb.).

They must be approved by the Republican conference, which includes all 42 GOP Senators, at a meeting called for 10 a. m. today.

Senate Democrats completed their committee selections last week. Because of their majority, the Democrats will hold all chairmanships.

Four freshman GOP lawmakers—Senators Hendrickson (N. J.), Mundt (S. Dak.), Margaret Chase Smith (Me.) and Schoeppel (Kan.)—were placed on the Senate District of Columbia Committee.

Senator McCarthy (Wis.) moved to the top GOP place on the Senate Expenditures Committee, which has conducted most investigations.

Better Government Is Aim

Business Joins Drive to Raise Federal Executives' Salaries

Editor's note: This is the second of two articles on the salary scale for Federal executives.

Business interests are taking what appears to be a man-bites-dog attitude toward the Federal service.

They have joined the drive to get adequate salaries paid Government executives instead of continuing their monotonous and ineffective damning of the bureaucrats.

The air transport industry, for example, is pleading for higher salaries for the Government officials who regulate it—members of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The radio broadcasters are demanding a salary increase of $10,000 to $25,000 for the seven officials with whom they must deal.

Multi-Billion Job Measure Ready Today

Two Administration Senators to Present Bill for Government Plant Construction

A revolutionary, multi-billion-dollar program of Government-financed plant construction to guarantee permanent "full employment" will be introduced in the Senate today.

The plan, known as the Full Employment Act of 1950, will be sponsored by Senators John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) and James E. Murray (D., Mont.) Administration stalwarts.

In his State-of-the-Union message last week, President Truman asked Congress to authorize an immediate study of production facilities for "materials in critically short supply, such as steel."

If found necessary, he said, Government loans should be used to expand production facilities. As a last resort he advocated plant construction by the Government.

There was no indication that the Murray-Sparkman proposal has the President's blessing, but the measure reportedly will be followed by other legislation dealing more specifically with the issue of Government built steel plants.

The full employment bill would provide Federal funds to State, municipal and Federal agencies for plant construction when such a step is deemed necessary by the President's Council of Economic Advisors. Outright grants would be authorized during depressions.

Also Private Grants

In addition, Government funds would be made available to private business for enlargement of plants, or for new facilities, as employment declined.

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) said yesterday that he strongly opposed the President's suggestion. He said, in a radio interview that once the Government starts building steel plants, it will be on the path to a controlled economy.

Former Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) described Mr. Truman's proposal as a "threat to nationalize the steel industry" unless that industry is "good."

The Kansas Republican, who recently retired after 30 years' Senate service, said in a broadcast that the public should realize that if the Administration leads the Nation onto the road to "state socialism," the people will have to "foot the bill."

While the Murray-Sparkman plan was subject to last-minute changes, there were indications it would call for a revitalized Reconstruction Finance Corp. to sustain the huge program.

The RFC would be given about 15 billion dollars as an investment loan fund. Use of the fund would hinge on recommendations of the President's top economic council, which was established by the original full employment act.

The new RFC would be composed of seven members, with salaries of $25,000 a year. They would be responsible for achieving the goals set by the President in his annual economic report.

Joe, the Wounded Robin, Migrates South by Plane

Malone, N. Y., Jan. 9 (AP)—Joe, a robin that was stranded in this bleak Canadian border village with a broken wing, began his fastest flight South today—aboard a Colonial Airlines plane.

Joe, so named by his benefactor, William Topp, was scheduled to arrive about midnight in Miami, where his fractured wing will have a chance to mend. The wing was broken by a cat.

Topp, a florist, has paid for the bird's passage. He said he found the bird New Year's Day on his windowsill looking in at a lighted Christmas tree.

More than 300 persons turned out at the airport to see Joe off.

Male Sex Hormones Shorten Their Lives

New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—Male sex hormones make a man's life shorter than a woman's—65 years for him, 70 for her.

Many reasons why were reported to the Gerontological Society, which closed its annual meeting today. The report was by Dr. James B. Hamilton of the Long Island College of Medicine, Brooklyn.

Sex itself is not the principal reason for shorter male life. These hormones, both male and female, are a driving force on the entire body. The male hormones drive harder.

Because of this, from cradle to grave, a man's body produces more heat than a woman's. The man's metabolism rate is higher. He manufactures more energy and takes more wear.

Even a man's tan is partly due to male hormones. Dr. Hamilton told of giving male sex hormone shots to a eunuch in midwinter. The man's skin thereupon tanned over his entire body, except where he had worn his bathing suit the previous summer. The hormones did all this winter tanning.

There are diseases which attack one sex oftener than the other. For men, there are twice as many of these as for women.

Dr. Hamilton said that many of the sex differences in physique disappear among castrated men. These changes tend toward less hard wear on the body.

Wives Face Average 8-Year Widowhood

Chicago, Jan. 9 (AP)—A doctor said today that the average American woman faces eight years of widowhood. Another expert added that women should help their menfolk live longer by giving them their seats on buses.

The first statement was made by Dr. Edward Stieglitz, a specialist in geriatrics, the study of health of the aged—in a broadcast of the University of Chicago round table over the National Broadcasting Co. network.

"The average American woman married a man five years older than herself—a man whose life expectancy is three years less than hers," Stieglitz said.

In New Book Raids to Raze Cities Called War Error

By Marshall Andrews

Strategic bombing in World War II was not only "morally wrong" and "politically suicidal," but was ineffectual and delayed victory at least a year, a military historian charged yesterday.

Writing in "Ordnance," periodical of the American Ordnance Association, Hoffman Nickerson focused attention on these conclusions of Maj. Gen. J. F. C. Fuller in a new book, "The Second World War," recently published in England. Nickerson's review of Fuller's work came immediately on the heels of Air Secretary Symington's plea Saturday for augmented United States strategic air power.

Fuller maintains that the true role of air power, as demonstrated in the 1947-1944 Burma campaign, is primarily transport and supply. The influence of the airplane on war, he contends, "would not in any essential respect differ from that of the horse when first used for military purposes."

Outstanding Military Writer

A retired British officer, General Fuller is one of the outstanding military writers of the time. His evaluation of armored tactics in the 1920s was adopted by the Germans and ultimately credited to French Gen. Charles de Gaulle. In his approach to the conduct of war he has consistently sought a mating of realism with

After-Hours Club Raided By Vice Squad

'Gold Key' Owner Held on Liquor Count, Patrons Not Detained

Vice squad raiders moved in on an after-hours club and two private homes early yesterday, arresting five persons on charges of either selling or illegally possessing liquor.

The principal operation was directed against the swank Gold Key Club, 608 E. 2d st., whose proprietor, Albert B. Glickfeld, 46, was arrested on liquor charges for the second time in four months.

Glickfeld, charged with two counts of keeping liquor without a license, is awaiting trial on a similar charge which resulted when the place was raided September 21.

Arrested with Glickfeld was a waitress, identified by police as Elizabeth P. McCullough, 30, 5202 47th ave., Edinaston, Md., who was charged with selling liquor without a license. Both she and the proprietor were released under $500 bond for hearing in Municipal Court today.

The vice squad, led by Lieut. Roy E. Blick, struck at 3 a. m. when the club was jammed with about 200 patrons, but none of the customers was detained.

Police confiscated all liquor in the club, which Blick said amounted to "several hundred" bottles.

Blick said he obtained a search warrant Saturday morning from United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence, after two police officers had gone into the Gold Key Friday night and purchased drinks.

The other two raids were conducted by a vice squad from the

Help Them Live Longer

Women Should Give Bus Seats To 'Weaker' Men, Doctor Says

Male sex hormones shorten their lives—65 years for him, 70 for her.

Many reasons why were reported to the Gerontological Society, which closed its annual meeting today. The report was by Dr. James B. Hamilton of the Long Island College of Medicine, Brooklyn.

Chicago, Jan. 9 (AP)—A doctor said today that the average American woman faces eight years of widowhood. Another expert added that women should help their menfolk live longer by giving them their seats on buses.

The first statement was made by Dr. Edward Stieglitz, a specialist in geriatrics, the study of health of the aged—in a broadcast of the University of Chicago round table over the National Broadcasting Co. network.

"The average American woman married a man five years older than herself—a man whose life expectancy is three years less than hers," Stieglitz said.

Another speaker, George Lawton, consulting psychologist and specialist in problems of older people, observed that women are the stronger sex.

"They should help their men live longer," Lawton said. "They should get up in buses to give men their seats. This, and marrying younger men, would help remove one of their problems of old age—those eight years of widowhood."

The third member of the panel, Robert J. Havighurst, chairman of the University of Chicago's committee on human development, said people should prepare in advance for old age and learn to adjust themselves to it.

"Our goal must not only be to add years to life, but also to add life to years," he said.

China Seeks Russia's Aid In Mediation

Communist Gains North of Nanking Prompt Extension Of Appeal to West

Nanking, Jan. 9 (AP)—China's hard-pressed government has asked Russia to join other big powers in an attempt to mediate the civil war, non-official but usually reliable sources reported today.

The diplomatic effort was spurred by increasing Red military pressure on the few defense positions remaining in government hands north of Nanking.

One press dispatch said Communist troops were almost within cannon range of the Yangtze after seizing the towns of Taihsing and Huanggang about 70 miles east of Nanking. In the north, Tientsin was under heavy assault.

Nonofficial sources said it was confirmed that the United States, France and Britain had been asked to study the civil war and to use their "good offices."

Soviet Envoy Informer

These sources said French Ambassador Jacques Meyrier, as dean of the diplomatic corps, carried the Chinese request to Soviet Ambassador N. V. Roschin, who is ill at his residence.

On the military front, observers predicted the isolated armies of Gen. Tu Liang-ning north of Nanking and the northern industrial city of Tientsin would fall to the Reds within a few days, if not hours.

Although the government maintained token air drops, it generally was conceded Tu's hungry troops could not hold out much longer.

(The Communist radio, heard in San Francisco, said Tu's armies have been reduced to 130,000 and are trapped in a pocket 6 miles square. Tu's forces originally were estimated at 250,000.)

Prize for Reds

The capture of Tu's troops, with their great stock of modern equipment, will open the way for a quick Communist march to the Yangtze unless a political settlement halts hostilities.

The Communists farther south already have opened attacks on the Hwai River defenses, 100 miles since the civil war.

A decree signed by Franco authorized Sephardic Jews in Greece and Egypt to apply for Spanish citizenship. The decree, approved by the cabinet on December 30 but published in the official journal for the first time today, said applicants would be selected carefully for "their love of Spain."

Sephardic Jews numbering about 100,000 were expelled from Spain in 1492 by King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella when they refused to recant their faith. Fifty thousand others, historians say, became Roman Catholics and remained in Spain.

Most of those expelled settled in Greece and Egypt and were under Spanish protection through an agreement in 1857 with the old Ottoman Empire, and subsequent agreements, in 1936, with Greece and Egypt. The latter expired this year, which impelled this new Spanish action.

The decree said only those who

Rabies Serum Sent Into Arctic Circle For Bitten Priest

Winnipeg, Jan. 9 (AP)—A Royal Canadian Air Force Dakota left today on a mercy mission that will send it 200 miles into the Arctic Circle carrying medical aid for a priest bitten by a mad Eskimo dog.

Father Ostran, 26, was bitten Friday at his Roman Catholic mission at Igloodik, one of several tiny icebound islands in Foxe Basin in the Northwest territories.

On the first lap, the plane will go to the Hudson Bay port of Churchill, Manitoba. From there the plane will make a nonstop flight tomorrow of nearly 2000 miles to Igloodik and back.

Because Igloodik lacks a land-strip, the plane will drop vaccine and other medical supplies by parachute, together with instructions.

Virginia Police Seek Missing Mary Washington College Girl

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 9 (AP)—Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frederickburg police said tonight that Miss Audrey Lee Smith, a 19-year-old Mary Washington College coed, had been missing since Friday afternoon.

Police said Miss Smith, a junior from Woodboro, Md., who is majoring in history, was last seen Friday about 2 p. m.

The girl was described by police as being 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighing 130 pounds, having brown hair and blue eyes. They said she had a birthmark 5 inches long and 2½ inches wide on her left ankle.

Miss Smith was believed to be wearing a green coat and black shoes and carrying a brown and white checked suitcase with a College of William and Mary sticker.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Smith. Her father, owner of a perfume company, said he had checked relatives and friends without success.

Smith said she was not engaged. He added that a son, George W. Smith of Walkersville, Md., had visited the Mary Washington campus over the weekend and had told him that friends of the girl said Miss Smith had been upset by a poor grade in Spanish.

The missing girl's oldest sister, Mary Louise Smith, said the family was convinced Audrey has not met with foul play "nor was any boy friend or date involved."

The sister said Audrey had often talked of going to Arizona or New Mexico.

British Concentrating Troops and Warships In Holy Land Area

Leave for Peace Talks ...

HIGH SPIRITS—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche (right), U. N. Palestine mediator, and Brig. Gen. William E. Riley, chief of staff of the U. N. Palestine truce supervision, were confident as they boarded a plane in New York yesterday for a flight to Athens. They will go to Rhodes for peace talks between the Egyptians and Jews.

London, Jan. 9 (AP)—Britain concentrated warships and troops in the tense Mediterranean area today to back up her "strong protest" to Israel against the shooting down of five RAF planes Friday.

A show of military and naval strength backing Britain's Arab allies seemed in the making.

Two Royal Navy frigates sailed from Malta for Cyprus, near the Palestine coast. A brigade of marines was alerted at Malta for shipment to an undisclosed British base in the Middle East.

An admiralty spokesman said the aircraft carrier Triumph and the cruiser Phoebe, which have been cruising in the Mediterranean, have been recalled to Malta to join other British warships concentrated there. A dispatch from the central Mediterranean island said shore leave for all British sailors was cancelled last night.

The British Foreign Office announced yesterday that troops had been sent from the Suez Canal zone to Trans-Jordan's Red Sea port of Aqaba. A Trans-Jordan government spokesman in Amman confirmed that the British troops had arrived in Aqaba at the request of Trans-Jordan.

British sources in London said more troops probably would be sent to Aqaba.

Britain also has threatened to shoot down any Israeli planes flying over Egyptian territory.

Bunche Orders Inquiry On 5 RAF Planes

New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—United Nations Palestine Mediator Ralph J. Bunche, departing for the island of Rhodes to open Palestine armistice negotiations, today ordered an on-the-spot U. N. inquiry into the shooting down of five British planes by Israeli forces.

Bunche announced the investigation shortly before leaving La Guardia Field at 12:20 p. m. (EST) for the Mediterranean island, where Israel and Egypt will attempt to sign a long-sought armistice.

He left with a tart warning that Britain as well as Israel and Egypt must adhere to the new cease-fire agreement in Palestine while the delicate armistice talks get under way.

"There isn't supposed to be any military activity on either side," Bunche said. "And that includes the British."

Bunche said he hoped to arrive in Rhodes by Wednesday and immediately begin the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations.

He termed the plane-shooting incident "unfortunate."

"I have asked U. N. observers on

Bootlegging Laid To U. S. Fliers by English Town

Lincoln, England, Jan. 9 (AP)—The Lincoln city council protested to United States Air Force authorities yesterday that American fliers, once heroes in this wartime base, are causing trouble by bringing bootleg liquor into town.

The protest was the latest of a series of incidents involving American fliers and local citizens. Recently gangs of hoodlums attacked Americans, using bicycle chains as flails in some instances.

The city council acted after a local employee had been found drunk at work with a bottle of rye whiskey at his side which analysis showed contained methyl alcohol.

Public house owners also have protested that Americans bring whisky bottles into bars to supplement the available stock.

Pilot Killed as Plane Strikes Texas School

Big Spring, Tex., Jan. 9 (AP)—A plane plunged into a schoolhouse near here today, wrecking the building and causing the building to burn. The pilot was killed.

No one was in the school when the twin-engine Beechcraft crashed.

The pilot was tentatively identified as a man named Maguire of the Trinity Drilling Co. of Dallas.

Acheson May Face Senate GOP Fight

Foreign Policy

Bipartisan Unity Seen On 2 Issues

Despite the political uproar over the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, two of the most vital foreign policy issues expected to confront the new Congress appeared certain yesterday of bipartisan support.

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) said Saturday that bipartisan foreign policy has broken down as a result of the Republican-Democratic row over membership of the key Senate committee. The controlling Democrats grabbed eight seats, leaving five to the GOP. In the Republican-controlled Eighty-first Congress, the GOP took seven, giving the Democrats six.

Both Administration and many congressional leaders, however, forecast strong bipartisan backing for two proposals which President Truman is due to urge upon Congress—probably beginning with his budget message today. These are: 1. A military alliance between western Europe and North America (the United States and Canada) to take the form of a "North Atlantic regional security system." Negotiations are now nearing completion at the State Department. Talks between department officials and leaders of Congress are expected to begin within two weeks.

2. A new peace treaty "Lend-Lease" program through which the Administration proposes to help rearm western Europe and possibly other countries whose military strength will contribute to United States security.

Highly secret negotiations between the American and western European military high commands have been under way several months on the "Lend-Lease" project. Mr. Truman probably will recommend this to Congress, not as revived Lend-Lease but as "mutual aid."

Wedding Talk Called 'Absurd' By Magnuson

Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.) denied yesterday that he is married to actress June Millard. "The reports that Miss Millard and I had been married are completely absurd," Magnuson told a reporter.

"I know Miss Millard and she recently stopped in Seattle on her way from New York to Beverly Hills. All of our friends there saw us together, and there was no mystery about it."

Magnuson said that he had started to drive to Washington from Seattle and heavy snowstorms in the West had forced him to leave his car in San Francisco and fly back.

The beautiful, blonde 25-year-old actress, known as Toni Seven, is the daughter of the early day movie figures, June Caprice and Harry Millard. She was left approximately three million dollars on the death of her parents.

Magnuson, now 43, was married while in college in 1928 to the former Eleanor Maddie of Seattle. She obtained a divorce in 1935 on grounds of incompatibility.

Toni Admits Seattle Visit, Declares Love for Him

Hollywood, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—Curvaceous Toni Seven admitted tonight she had been in Seattle recently to get acquainted with Senator Warren G. Magnuson's family but deplored the publicity their romance had received.

"I love him enough to step out of the picture if I thought this publicity about us would hurt his senatorial career," the actress said. She capably answered questions about their friendship but wouldn't admit marriage was impending.

Marshall Recuperating . . .

AT HOME—Secretary of State George C. Marshall and his wife are shown before their house at Pinehurst, N. C., where the Secretary is recuperating after a recent operation.

By The Associated Press

The Senate Republican Policy Committee may be called upon to decide whether to make an organized—if futile—attack on President Truman's choice of Dean Acheson as Secretary of State.

There was some sentiment—notably from GOP Floor Leader Wherry of Nebraska—to thrash out the matter at a conference of Republican Senators today. Wherry said it "undoubtedly will come up" there.

But Senator Taft of Ohio, who is policy chairman, later told a reporter he thinks the matter should be discussed first by the Policy Committee at a later meeting. Wherry is on that committee.

Taft Undecided
Taft said he has not made up his mind how he will vote on Acheson's confirmation. He had been quoted Saturday as saying he would vote for Acheson.

"I have not decided," the Ohioan said, "and that is not to say that I won't vote for him. I just don't want to be prejudiced."

Taft said he agrees with Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, that there should be a full examination of Acheson's qualifications for the post to be vacated by the retirement of Secretary Marshall.

Wherry made no secret of his personal opposition to Acheson, whose nomination as Undersecretary of State was opposed unsuccessfully by the Nebraska in 1945.

Views Held 'Leftist'
In that and other criticisms of Acheson, Wherry expressed the belief that Acheson represented a "leftist" viewpoint.

"I haven't changed my mind about Acheson," Wherry said. "That's my personal view, but I don't know until I talk with other Republicans how they feel about it and whether they will be inclined to fight confirmation."

It seemed likely, however, that if any Republicans band together to fight the appointment, they will represent only the faction in the party most critical of Administration foreign policies in the past.

Senators Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Smith (R., N. J.), members of the Foreign Relations Committee, indicated in weekend statements that they probably would support Acheson if hearings develop nothing to change their minds.

Willing to Hear Record
Senator Connally (D., Tex.), who steps in as new chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee this week, said that so far as he is concerned, the committee will call anybody who has pertinent information about Acheson's record.

Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.) has suggested that Senators hear Adolph A. Berle, Jr., former State Department official, who crossed swords with Acheson in a battle over policy in 1944 when Acheson was Assistant Secretary.

Mundt, not a committee member, also has suggested that Whitaker Chambers, admitted former Communist courier, be called.

New Rent Bill Is Promised Consideration

Chairman Brent Spence promised yesterday that his House Banking Committee will give "full consideration" to a strong new rent control bill drafted by several Administration Senators.

The bill, drawn up with the aid of rent control officials, would extend controls for 27 months and subject "gouging" landlords to stiff fines and possible jail sentences. The present rent law runs out March 31.

Spence, a Kentucky Democrat, said he had not seen the proposed legislation and could not commit himself until his committee has been able to review the entire rental housing situation.

But he said rent control extension will be one of the "very first" matters taken up by his group. The Senate proposal, he said, will get "full consideration at that time."

The new legislation would authorize Rent Director Tighe E. Woods to impose rent controls on new rental construction—something that Woods himself has requested. It also would give him power to bring new rental areas under controls and would throw up strong new safeguards around the rights of tenants.

Apparently anticipating such proposals, the National Association of Real Estate Boards yesterday opened a campaign—apparently foredoomed to failure—to erase all rent controls.

Robert P. Gerholz of Flint, Mich., chairman of the group, said a survey of 33 key cities showed that three times as many apartments were advertised in December as there were ads by persons seeking apartments.

That, he said, is proof that the housing shortage has "eased materially." He said continuation of rent control simply will discourage new rental construction.

Ellender, Ives Differ On Peace Over Housing

Senator Ellender (D., La.) predicted yesterday that Democrats and Republicans will iron out their differences over housing legislation and get behind a bipartisan program.

But Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) took a dim view of the prospects. He said: "It seems to me the Democrats themselves have slammed the door to reconciliation by not giving Senator Taft a proper chance to join them." He said it appears the Democrats are after partisan credit.

Taft, Ohio Republican, protested in the Senate last week that he was not given an opportunity to study an Administration housing bill before it was introduced by Ellender and six other Democratic Senators.

For that reason, Taft announced, he decided not to join them as he had planned. Two other Republicans, Senators Flanders (Vt.) and Tobey (N. H.), also withdrew from sponsorship.

Rank-and-file Government union members want to work with capable and intelligent administrators. Business interests want competent officials who can understand and help solve their complicated problems. Also, they want stability and continuity in administration of Government policies.

With the rapid turnover in top jobs, business never knows what to expect. As everyone should realize by this time, the present ancient executive salary scale has forced scores of able officials to resign their jobs, a situation which prevents the President, in his own words, of being able to select the best-qualified people for important Government posts.

The FCC has had four different chairmen in the past several years; the CAB, only a few months ago, had only three members, one of whom wishes to retire due to illness but was unable to leave the agency without a quorum. It took the President months to find people to accept the jobs—and all at a financial sacrifice.

The world's largest corporation, the Commodity Credit Corporation in the Agriculture Department, has had four different presidents since 1945. This mighty corporation has a bank account of more than five billion dollars, a sum greater than the combined deposits of the half-dozen biggest banks in the country.

The president is 39-year-old Ralph S. Trigg, who last year spent more than three billion dollars. His salary: $10,330 a year. The daily and almost routine decisions of this young man directly affects the price you pay for bread, meat, milk and eggs—just about everything you eat. A mistake on his part could cost us hundreds of millions.

In fact, before Trigg's time, a sugar rationing bill was passed by the Congress—a bill reportedly written by sugar lobbyists. That bill, which became law, did cost the consumer several hundred million dollars a year.

Ordinarily, the bill would have been written in the Agriculture Department. But at that time, the department was short-handed of sugar experts for the very simple reason that three of them had resigned to accept far more lucrative jobs with private interests.

There are few jobs in the world more important than the Secretary of State. A large measure of responsibility for war or peace rests on his shoulders. We have had five different Secretaries of State in the past five years. During that period, many of their assistants have had to resign because

Merchant Marine Student Lectures To Be Televised

New York, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—Students at the Merchant Marine Academy are going to see some of their lectures over television starting tomorrow, the Navy announced. The lecturers will stand before cameras at the Navy's special devices center, Sandis Point, Long Island, and their words and picture will be sent by micro wave to the academy at Kings Point, 4.7 miles away.

An effort is being made to keep "a sense of personal relationship," the Navy said, by keeping the classes down to 30 students. A two-way radio link will enable students to question their teachers.

Alaska, Hawaii Statehood Plan Gains Impetus

By The Associated Press
The new Congress may add two new stars to the United States flag. The Democratic Party, now in control, is pledged in its platform to support "immediate statehood" for Hawaii and Alaska.

President Truman wants it. He has said so twice in messages to Congress. He said so again to the press last week.

So there is a new air of expectancy surrounding representatives of the two Territories as the Eighty-first Congress organizes to begin its work.

Statehood legislation made its greatest advance in the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress. The Hawaii bill passed the House, 196 to 133, but died without a vote in the Senate. The Alaska bill was approved without dissent by the House Public Lands Committee, but failed to get to the House floor for a vote.

Never before had either measure been recommended by a full legislative committee of either branch of Congress.

E. L. Bartlett (D.), Alaska-non-voting Delegate to Congress, feels that with the backing of the President and the Democratic majority in Congress, the chances of statehood for Alaska have never been better.

Delegate Joseph R. Farrington (R., Hawaii), reflecting his Territory's disappointment over not reaching the statehood goal last year, is cautious of optimism. He sees "many uncertainties."

Perhaps this is significant: One of those who quit for financial reasons is the present Secretary-designate, Dean Acheson, who resigned as Undersecretary 18 months ago. The day before the President announced Acheson's appointment he sent letters to Democratic congressional leaders, begging them to pass the executive pay bill promptly in order for him to attract and to hold first-rate executives.

Webb's Position
Perhaps the President had James Webb in mind, too, when he wrote the letter. As Director of the Budget, Webb is paid $10,000 to direct the spending of 40 billion a year. He has done such an outstanding job that he has had offers several times that figure from private industry. As Undersecretary of State, Webb will get a $20,000 raise—to $12,000.

The bill to raise the salaries of 200-odd top Government executives can be defended on its merits since most of the people it would benefit are unable to live on their Federal salaries. They must have private incomes; they must dip into their savings, or they are forced into debt.

Federal officials as a group haven't had their salaries raised in years, thus constituting one of the few groups in the Nation which has had no increase to offset the 75-per-cent rise in living costs since 1940. Some salaries were fixed as far back as 1912.

The measure would cost $1,600,000 a year. The emphasis, however, should be placed on the saving to all of us through better and more efficient Government. Former President Herbert C. Hoover is among those who believe it will pay dividends of many times that amount in a more effective Government.

George said that his biggest concern is that "Congress will go beyond what the President proposes."

"Certainly the budget will be high enough as it comes from the President," he said. "I only hope Congress will hold itself within that limit."

Senator Millard F. Tydings (D., Md.) said in a radio broadcast that about one third of the 1950 budget will go for National defense, including the Berlin airlift.

He warned that trying to economize on such programs could result in driving western Europe "into some sort of alliance or agreement with Russia."

The Maryland Democrat said the place to economize is on domestic programs. These, he said, must be judged by Congress mainly on the basis of "can we afford to have it?" instead of "is this a good thing to have?"

As Aid to Congress Civil Rights Arguments Summed Up

By The Associated Press
A Congressional Library publication asserting that racial and religious prejudice are Nation-wide was expected yesterday to lay groundwork for the forthcoming civil rights fight in Congress.

Prepared by the Legislative Reference Service as a guide for Congress, the publication sums up arguments for and against civil rights proposals. It was prepared by W. Brooke Graves, senior specialist in American government in public administration.

While State antidiscrimination laws "appear to have worked satisfactorily under existing conditions" of a tight labor market, the publication said, there is no assurance "that they would continue to do so in a period of widespread unemployment."

Legislation aimed to equalize job-getting opportunities stands high on the list of civil rights measures.

"It cannot be too strongly emphasized," Graves wrote, "that the problems of prejudice and discrimination are country-wide" and no State, section or community should feel that it is being singled out for criticism.

"While the Jews and the Negroes are the most numerous, minority groups in wide variety exist in sections, States and cities throughout the country. All are the victims of local prejudice, oftentimes of actual discrimination."

In southern New Jersey, it is the Italians; in Pennsylvania, Nebraska and Wisconsin, the Germans; in Minnesota and the Dakotas, the Scandinavians; in the New England mill villages, the French Canadians, and in Boston, the Irish; in Chicago and Detroit, the Poles; in Texas and the Southwest, the Mexicans; on the Pacific Coast, the Orientals.

Legislative aid or edict cannot eliminate prejudice, Graves said, but "the outward, social manifestation of prejudice can be corrected by legislation and perhaps only by legislation."

But, said Fishbein: "Government expenditures invariably must be safeguarded by the use of adequate documents. Wherever Government sickness insurance prevails, the number of forms required is a serious waste of physicians' time. This interference . . . destroys the standard of medical service."

Wrecked Plane Sighted

Ewing Differs With Fishbein On Health Law

By The Associated Press
Is national health insurance a step toward socialization of the United States economy?

That question, pro-ounded by the magazine American Druggist, drew opposite answers yesterday from Oscar Ewing, Federal Security administrator, and from Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Ewing's answer, in part, was: "Absolutely no. National health insurance is no more socialistic than fire insurance. Do not forget that opponents of practically all forward-looking legislation have attempted to stigmatize it as 'socialistic.'"

Dr. Fishbein said: "National health insurance would be the first step toward socialization of the entire United States if this country follows the downward path already followed by other countries."

The American Druggist, as part of its magazine forum, submitted 15 questions to the two men. Neither knew beforehand of the other's answers.

Ewing insisted that national health insurance, which is advocated by President Truman, would improve the quality of medical care "as it applies to the entire 7 million of our population."

"This will happen because patients will be free to call on the doctor early in disease," he added. But Fishbein argued:

"Compulsory sickness insurance would quite certainly lower the quality of medical care in the United States. In England the quality of medical care already has deteriorated in the attempt to raise the quantity."

"To safeguard the expenditure of public funds," the two men also were asked, "will national health insurance require Government red tape and controls which will interfere with the effective practice of medicine?"

Ewing said such insurance is "not socialized or State medicine. Its sole purpose is to organize the payment for medical services on a basis where the patient will not have to count the cost of each doctor's visit. I see no reason for any red tape of controls which will in any way interfere with the normal doctor-patient relationship."

But, said Fishbein: "Government expenditures invariably must be safeguarded by the use of adequate documents. Wherever Government sickness insurance prevails, the number of forms required is a serious waste of physicians' time. This interference . . . destroys the standard of medical service."

Ruhr Plant Appeal Cabled to Truman

College Girl Is Missing

SOUGHT—Miss Audrey Lee Smith, 19, of Woodboro, Md., a junior at Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va., has been missing since Friday, police reported yesterday. Friends said she was upset over a poor grade. Her family declared they were convinced she had not met with foul play "nor was any boy friend or date involved." (Story on Page 1)

Bullitt Warns West to Unite

New York, Jan. 9 (AP).—The Marshall Plan nations must unite or perish, William C. Bullitt, former American Ambassador to Russia and France, said today.

Bullitt's warning was contained in a preface to a pamphlet on the proposed federation of western Europe, published today by New York University.

"Even without war, even without the burden of modern rearmament," he said, "unless the ECA countries can unite their economies, they will suffer diminished standards of living which will, in the end, lead to their conquest by the Communist fifth columns within their gates."

"Add to that picture the threat of war, the desperate need for rearmament and the certainty that even with American help all the military resources of a united western Europe with standardized arms and unified command, would be required to prevent the Red army from marching to the Atlantic, and the question becomes inescapable: Why do not the Europeans realize that they must unite or perish?"

Air National Guard Now 94 Per Cent Complete

Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard Bureau, said today that Air National Guard organization now is more than 94 per cent complete with 485 of its 514 units Federally recognized.

Cramer said the latest unit to complete organization is the Fifth Fighter Wing headquarters at Columbus, Ohio. Under command of Brig. Gen. Errol H. Zistel, this wing has units in Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia.

Bombing of Cities Called Tactical War Error

Imagination while never deviating from the concept that war is an instrument of policy.

Thus he says of the appeal to strategic bombing in World War II that it subordinated the political point of view to the military and therefore was "contrary to common sense."

In support of this view he quotes Clausewitz: "The subordination of the political point of view to the military would be contrary to common sense, for policy has declared the war; it is the intelligent faculty, war only the instrument, and not the reverse."

And he contends: "I have always held that war is no more than a lethal argument, and, to be worth the fighting, it demands a sane and profitable political end."

"That the object of war is not slaughter and devastation, but to persuade the enemy to change his mind."

That 'strategic bombing,' as inaugurated by Mr. Churchill, was not only morally wrong but militarily wrong and politically suicidal—one has only to look at central Europe today to see this."

"That bombardments of obliteration, as resorted to by so many generals, are as clumsy as they are generally unremunerative."

The net result of the strategic bombing of Germany, Fuller says, was "appalling slaughters which would have disgraced Attila," a wrecked postwar economy and a year's delay in the cross-channel assault. Instead, he maintains, the Allies should have concentrated on fighters and fighter-bombers to secure air supremacy and lend tactical assistance to ground forces and on air transport and landing craft.

As for strategic bombing of Japan, including the two atomic attacks, Fuller finds the same result. He quotes the Strategic Bombing Survey to show that Japanese morale was crushed, not by bombing, but by starvation and the military defeat of the Japanese armies. Starvation was brought Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 9 (AP).—Germans called on President Truman today to intervene in Allied military plans to dismantle one of the Ruhr Valley's big steel plants.

Cables to the President and Secretary of State George C. Marshall left here in the name of the management and workers of the Bochumer-Verein steel plant at Bochum.

Dismantling of the plant was halted last week, when irate employees prevented dismantling teams from doing their work.

A showdown between workers and British military authorities is expected Monday when dismantling crews will make a new attempt to pull down equipment.

The dismantling program is part of the broad outline of disarmament and reparations.

The cable said in part: "Our workers do not want and will not participate in the destruction of their working places—not even under the pending pressure of military force."

"No German can stomach the paradox of the Marshall Plan on the one hand, and the deliberate destruction of peaceful production on the other hand."

"This appeal is not dictated by narrow nationalism. Here is the voice of patriots fighting for common sense and survival. You cannot expect us to carry out our own execution."

Notices have been posted in the plant, warning employees that interference with the dismantling program is an offense against British military government.

CARE President Hopes For Ruhr Policy Shift

Murray D. Lincoln, president of the Cooperative League of the United States of America and also of CARE, last night saw hope for a change in United States policy on control of the German Ruhr Valley in appointment of Dean Acheson and James E. Webb as Secretary and Undersecretary of State, respectively. He said:

"Judging by the records of the two men for broad and humanitarian liberalism, I think we have cause for hope. President Truman has made it very clear that he is anxious to prevent any disposition of Ruhr industries which might leave open the slightest possibility that they could return to cartel control."

"The six-power agreement is obviously only a stop-gap arrangement."

Austrian Asks Treaty Action

Vienna, Jan. 9 (AP).—Austrian Chancellor Leopold Figl said today that "peace could start from Vienna and march around the world" if the Big Four would agree to an Austrian treaty.

Figl told a Peoples Party rally that the four-power meetings on the Austrian treaty were deadlocked because "Austria was not admitted as a negotiating party, but was condemned to the role of a defendant that can speak only if asked to."

The quadripartite treaty negotiations will be resumed next month in London on Austria's initiative. Figl said Austria deserved its freedom because "we grant absolute freedom to all democratic citizens, and we don't arrest any cardinals or ban papal circular letters."

He said that regardless of outcome of the treaty talks, the Austrian government has demanded that some 600 Austrians kidnapped or arrested by the Russians in the last three years and held outside Austria, be "returned to Austria as soon as possible."

Figl further demanded that 10,000 Austrian prisoners of war still held in Soviet camps be returned.

Five Reported Killed When Plane Crashes

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 9 (AP).—An airplane crashed in the mountains northeast of here today and reports to the sheriff's office said five or six persons were killed.

that it became effective in Europe. Under Eisenhower's insistence, he says, bombing was more nearly concentrated on transportation and oil supplies, with fatal results both to the Wehrmacht and the Luftwaffe.

Burma Given as Example

Even the achievement of air superiority, Fuller maintains, depends not on "careening about in the skies . . . challenging the enemy's air force to single combat—the conception of experts—but by depriving the enemy's air force of its bases and by winning new bases for one's own air force." Again he cites the Burma campaign as an example of this method properly developed.

The reduction of the Italian island of Pantelleria, customarily referred to as a victory by air power alone, was nothing of the sort, Fuller contends. Actually, he says, 6570 tons of bombs were dropped on the island in two days, with "surprisingly light" casualties and material damage, and the garrison surrendered only when a "formidable armada" was seen approaching by sea.

Nickerson, reviewing the book which will be published in the United States January 20 by Duell, Sloane & Pearce, holds it up as a direct challenge to "the gentlemen of the United States Strategic Air Force." He demands:

"To what extent can you show that strategic bombing, with or without atomic explosives, is ultimately worthwhile? Most of all, can you show how any war of indiscriminate mass destruction can possibly lead to any real peace? If not, then what is your speciality good for?"

It was not, says Fuller, until Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower insisted on control of air power prior to the Normandy invasion that it became effective in Europe. Under Eisenhower's insistence, he says, bombing was more nearly concentrated on transportation and oil supplies, with fatal results both to the Wehrmacht and the Luftwaffe.

British Protest to Israel . . .

NOTE LODGED—Sir Terence Shone (left) British deputy to the U. N. Security Council, and Arthur Lourie, Israeli representative, are shown at New York when Shone handed Lourie Britain's protest that Israel had shot down five British planes. Later Lourie refused to transmit the protest to his government because the note was addressed to the "authorities at Tel Aviv" instead of to the Israeli government.

Jews Again Reject Protest

Friday's clashes in which the British say five RAF planes were shot down inside Egyptian territory. The Jews contend at least one of the air engagements took place "over Israel."

The Jewish source said the two British pilots taken prisoner in Israeli territory had been briefed in Egypt not to cross the Israeli frontier.

Israeli officials identified the Britons as T. J. McElhew and Frank Harvey Close. The two fliers were quoted as giving this account of their experience to interrogators:

At the time they were spotted by the Israeli planes they were not sure where they were. They may have lost orientation because of the ancient Roman road running southwest from Beerseba which the Israelis secretly rebuilt.

Road Not Mapped

That road has not been mapped. Israeli troops used it in their recent drive against the Egyptians—an operation which began in southern Palestine and included raids deep into Egypt's Sinai Peninsula.

McElhew and Close said they were shot down on their squadron's fourth mission in the area. On New Year's day their mission included the photographing of Israeli defense positions, they said.

McElhew and Close decided to bail out according to instructions instead of crash landing on one of the many emergency strips in the area. They said, according to the Israeli informants, that if they crash-landed they were afraid there was considerable danger they would be "captured and murdered by the Egyptians."

2 Prehistoric 'Finds' Made By Scientists

Russian scientists have been acquiring "a great body" of data on prehistoric man and on the basic racial elements of the Soviet people, the Smithsonian Institution said yesterday.

Two finds of remains of Neanderthal man, the cave-dwelling "pre-men" of Europe who immediately preceded the present human species, were particularly cited in the report compiled by Henry Field. Field represented the Smithsonian and other American cultural organizations at the world scientific gathering sponsored by the Soviet Academy of Sciences in 1945.

One "find" was more than 150 fragments of a child's skull. These have been painstakingly fitted together and the reconstructed skull affords the only information on the Neanderthal juvenile, the report said.

The other find was that of a Neanderthal hand, which, when reconstructed, was quite different from the human hand of today. The hand, flat and pawlike, was also different from that of any of the manlike apes and "definitely a development in the human direction."

The report says that Soviet research shows that among northern Siberian peoples an aquiline nose is notable, perhaps affording a clue to the origin of the American Indian.

Russians Claim Flight Years Before Wrights

Moscow, Jan. 9 (AP).—Komsomol Pravda claimed today that a Russian flew the first airplane 21 years before the Wright brothers.

The newspaper, organ of the Soviet youth organization, said that in July, 1882, a monoplane—powered by three steam engines and designed by A. F. Mozhaisky, was flown by a pilot named Golubev. Representatives of the Russian War Ministry and friends of the inventor watched as the plane flew in the first power flight of a heavier-than-air machine ever recorded, the account said.

(Orville and Wilbur Wright are credited by most historians with having made the first flights of a power-driven heavier-than-air machine at Kitty Hawk, N. C., on December 17, 1903.)

Komsomol Pravda said the plane could land on water or land. It printed photographs from a Russian newspaper purporting to describe the plane.

In the meantime, at an Academy of Sciences meeting in Leningrad, claims were being made for Russian priority on a long list of inventions.

In one address, Prof. V. V. Danilevsky listed among Russian "firsts":

Steamship engines, motorships, electric ships, oil refining, petroleum cracking, underground gasification of coal, the telephone, insulated cable, electric lighting, the transformer, transmission of direct and alternating current, radio, the airplane, the parachute, the pull propeller and contemporary rocket techniques.

China Extends Bid to Russia promise peace but a dictated peace.

The Communists abandoned the idea of a middle-of-the-road peace after the breakdown of the Marshall mediation effort in 1947. They show no inclination to return to it.

In this light, Chiang Kai-shek's New Year peace conditions are so divorced from the reality of the Communist attitude that they stand no chance of Communist acceptance. It is unlikely there can be serious talk of peace with Nanking unless Chiang resigns.

On the basis of these Communist declarations over the past year, it can be assumed that the basic Communist peace requirements are these:

1. Creation of a new Communist-led coalition government under a new constitution.

2. Break-up of the Kuomintang government and its leading party, with exclusion from public office of all persons who have been labeled as war criminals, reactionaries and "running dogs of American imperialism."

3. Elimination of American influence from Chinese governmental affairs.

4. Establishment of diplomatic and commercial relations with all countries, including the United States, but with special cordiality toward the Soviet Union.

5. Eventual extension over China of the Communist program of the "new democracy."

'In Case of War' 6-Point Plan Outlined By Shippers

By the United Press

The shipping industry warned yesterday that America's merchant fleet is seriously short of fleet oil tankers and passenger ships that could be converted into troop transports in case of war.

The industry included the statement in a plea for "sympathetic" Government consideration of a six-point program outlined by the National Federation of American Shippers.

The program, it said, is aimed at enabling the Nation's merchant fleet to carry at least half of all its imports and exports. The federation said the United States also must have a modern passenger fleet operating on principal overseas routes.

This country's prewar fleet carried only about 30 per cent of its foreign trade.

The federation said:

1. Private industry must have the incentive to build and operate a sufficient number of vessels.

2. American shipping must get its full share of European relief shipments at rates which will give it a fair profit.

3. "Unfair competitive practices" of competing foreign shippers must be wiped out.

4. Foreign countries must grant American shippers the same privileges their shippers enjoy in this country.

5. Private owners using the Panama Canal should pay only "fair and reasonable" tolls and should not be expected to absorb any of the military costs of the canal.

6. Japan's merchant marine should be limited to the "reasonable requirements" of its own domestic and foreign commerce.

The federation conceded that this country's privately owned merchant fleet now includes some 1216 ships of almost 14,200,000 deadweight tons. This compares with a prewar merchant fleet of 1236 ships of 10,237,000 tons.

But it is said present fleet is "unbalanced" because of a "deficiency of steamships to serve the passenger-carrying trades and for troop transports, and in fleet tankers as bulk oil carriers for national defense."

In addition, it said, the coastwise and intercoastal fleet has shrunk from 450 dry cargo and combination vessels before the war to only 135 present.

Strike Machinery In Labor Law Hit

Cyrus S. Ching found fault yesterday with the elaborate strike-stalling machinery of the Taft-Hartley Act in national emergencies. He said important features of it delay agreements.

The director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service also said in a report to Congress that Government mediators must remain impartial to be effective in settling labor disputes.

But Ching refrained from stating any stand in the current controversy over whether his agency should remain independent or, as asked by Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin, return to the Labor Department as it was prior to the Taft-Hartley Act.

Ready to Recommend

However, Ching strongly insisted that Government mediators are at maximum usefulness only as long as they remain neutral as between labor and management. He said he was ready to make legislative recommendations when requested.

"It is essential to the effective performance of the mediator's duty," Ching advised Congress, "that his institutional and personal relationships be such that neither side will have its suspicions aroused, however unjustly, that he is answerable to another with a suspected partisan stake in the dispute."

The Mediation Service's report on its experience under several Taft-Hartley provisions included these observations:

1. The 80-day court injunctions in national emergency disputes have tended to "delay rather than facilitate settlement," because both sides tend to sit out the period, leaving a question whether there should be a shorter injunction period or one of indefinite duration.
2. The requirement that a presidential fact-finding board must report its findings before an injunction can be obtained interferes with collective bargaining in the crucial period before a strike deadline.
3. Fact-finding boards, being prohibited from recommending any settlement terms, are unable to mobilize public opinion behind the disputing parties to reach an agreement.
4. The emergency dispute requirement that workers must be polled on an employer's last offer has proved useless. The ballots "are expensive to conduct, and the experience of a year demonstrates they do nothing to promote settlement; to the contrary, they are a disrupting influence in collective bargaining and mediation." They have been repeatedly rejected by the workers.
5. Parties in labor disputes are required by law to participate in conferences called by the mediation service. But there is no penalty if a few employees and unions have refused to cooperate.

May Deadline Set for Action On Labor Law

The Administration moved yesterday to push a new labor law through Congress before May 1. Senator Lucas of Illinois, who will become majority leader January 20, told reporters every effort would be made to complete action before that time—the deadline on which many labor contracts expire.

Lucas predicted that the Administration's weight will be placed solidly behind a one-package bill which wraps up Taft-Hartley Act repeal with revisions of the Wagner Act suggested by President Truman.

"That's what the President said he wants, and that's probably what he will do," the Illinois Senator said.

Lucas said Representative Lesinski (D., Mich.) "has the right idea" in attempting to wrap up the whole question in one bill. Lesinski, who will become House Labor Committee chairman next week, hopes to arrange a conference with Mr. Truman on procedure.

Labor unions have been pushing for a two-step approach. Under this plan, the Taft-Hartley Act would be repealed immediately and the original Wagner Act restored. Then Congress would consider Wagner Act changes.

The two-package handling of the issue is favored by at least five of the 13 members of the new Senate Labor Committee, including Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah).

Even if the committee decides to follow that plan, however, Senator Taft (R., Ohio) has said the Senate will get a chance to vote on most of the Taft-Hartley Act provisions when the repealer is brought up.

Cultural Parley To Seek Basis For World Peace

New York, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—More than 200 artists, scientists, educators and clergymen issued a call today for a cultural and scientific conference in March to seek a basis for common action for world peace.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, chairman of the National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, issued the call for the conference, to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel here March 25-27.

"Whatever may be our views in regard to the social, political, and economic policies of the Soviet Union, we agree that it is necessary to reestablish American-Soviet understanding and cooperation, which alone can make peace possible," the group said.

CIO's Tax Plan Would Exempt 20 Million Families' Earnings

The CIO proposed yesterday that a family of four earning less than $4200 a year be exempt from Federal income taxes.

That would relieve about 20 million families from paying any Federal tax on earnings.

A family of four now pays about $225 in taxes. Prior to last year's cut, such a family paid approximately $342.

The CIO offered a plan for a sweeping shift in the tax burden from low and middle income families to corporations and persons with high yearly earnings.

In some respects the CIO program jibed with President Truman's tax proposal to Congress last week. However, the CIO would remove all excise taxes—the levies on such items as liquor, fur coats, cosmetics, cigarettes and gasoline. The CIO also would renew the excess profits tax—a point not mentioned by Mr. Truman.

All told, the CIO figures, its program would bring a net gain of 200 million dollars. The President asked for four billion dollars more in order to balance the budget and reduce the debt.

In an elaborate, 32-page booklet the CIO had much to say about balancing the budget. In poor times, the CIO thought that balancing the books was a "secondary consideration."

The theme of the tax program is to bring about "a healthy post-war America," by promoting full employment, the CIO said.

"Clearly it does not follow that lower taxes on business will mean more production," the booklet declared. "It may mean that more will be available for dividends to those who represent the saving rather than the consuming backbone of the country."

For Consumption Power

"If those who do the bulk of consuming have large portions of their incomes taxed away, no amount of tax reduction to business for incentive purposes will supply the

Agency Cites Need to Alter Road Program

Road construction costs—and transportation needs in general—broke so many records last year the Nation must revise its highway building procedure, the Public Roads Administration said yesterday.

In its annual report, the agency cited:

1. New all-time peaks in number of vehicles in use and in traffic volume on all classes of roads.
2. Construction costs double those of 1940, and rising.
3. Shortages of materials and equipment.
4. A continued "difficult labor situation."
5. An all-time peak in State highway department construction contract awards for Federal-aid and non-Federal work—$1,058,927,000 as compared with $817,742,000 in the preceding fiscal year.
6. Continued deterioration of thousands of miles of old pavement.

The agency report said major weaknesses of existing roads and streets demand "immediate action."

"It is apparent that past policies and procedures, which have been dictated largely by the revenues available, will be inadequate," the report said.

Nearly 60 per cent of the improved mileage now on the Federal-aid primary system will wear out within the next 10 years and require improvement, it added.

"The entire field of highway transportation needs to be reanalyzed in view of the present inability to keep pace with the new demands for service," PRA declared.

CIO to Press Drive in South

Atlanta, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—The CIO today hammered out a plan to capture the South's nonunion workers by drives in each of 11 States' major industry.

The plan was forged in a closed session of some 600 CIO leaders and organizers—the first such meeting in the CIO's 2-year-old Southern campaign.

There was no official confirmation of the line of attack.

One official, however, who asked for anonymity, said the leaders agreed to set up the renewed drive on a State-wide basis.

Thus, he explained, the State director would designate a single industry and call for a concerted effort within it.

Since a major industry in most of the Southern States is textiles, the Textile Workers Union of America is expected to bear the brunt of the action.

This was borne out by a report that the TWUA would set up a branch office for the first time in Atlanta around March 1. Negotiations for office space reportedly have been completed.

One other development in the meeting, said the unofficial spokesmen, was instructions to the organizers "to stay out of politics and organize."

Any politicking will be done by the Political Action Committee of the CIO and the national office, he said.

The Southern Organization Committee now has $1,200,000 for ammunition.

Apartment, Yacht Basin To Be Built

Plans for a $7,500,000 multiple-story, 795-unit apartment development, with a private yacht basin, to be located in South Alexandria along Hunting Creek, have been announced by sponsors of the project.

The development, to be known as Hunting Towers, will consist of three eight-story buildings on a 10-acre tract. It will lie between Mount Vernon Blvd. and the Potomac River, just across the highway from the Hunting Terrace Apartments.

Work is expected to begin about February 15, sponsors say. When completed, the project will be the largest elevator-type development in the Washington suburban area, and the only large one with its own river frontage.

Included in present plans are provisions for a yacht basin to berth craft owned by tenants.

Sponsors, all Alexandrians, are Phillips B. Connelly, John B. Frank Pratt, Elliott F. Hoffman and Frank Pratt.

According to Connelly, the development will have rentals in the "medium" range. He said the three buildings would be of buff brick, with limestone facings and fireproof construction.

The Federal Housing Administration has agreed to insure the bulk of a $6,619,800 mortgage on the development, with the Irving Trust Co. of New York listed as the mortgagee. The FHA is permitted to insure loans up to 90 per cent of reproduction costs.

Buildings will be heated by radiant heating plants, underground space will be provided for about 160 cars, and other parking facilities will be offered above ground.

Connelly said only about 15 per cent of the landscape 10-acre tract will be occupied by the three buildings.

Smallest apartment units provided in the Hunting Towers development will have combined living-bedrooms, kitchen, and bath. Largest apartments will offer two bedrooms, living room, dining room, kitchen and bath.

Strike Is Voted By New York Tugboat Workers

New York, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—The 3500 tugboat workers who transport most of the fuel oil and coal to the Nation's largest city, voted tonight to strike at 12:01 a. m. Thursday if an agreement with employers is not reached by that time.

A tugboat strike would paralyze activity in bustling New York harbor and endanger in midwinter the fuel supply of the city, which consumes some 20 million gallons of fuel oil each winter. It would halt the docking of all large ships entering the port.

The men, members of Local 333, United Marine Division of the International Longshoremen's Association (ILA), are demanding a 25 per cent wage boost, two extra holidays, seniority guarantees, increased health and life insurance and an additional man on some tugs. Average earnings of tugboat workers now range from $300 to $400 a month.

'Free of Strife' Probe Group Lauds TVA's Labor Amity

Staff investigators for a congressional committee have poured lavish praise on labor relations of the Tennessee Valley Authority, it was disclosed yesterday.

The report was prepared by three staff employees of the joint Congressional Labor Committee created by the Taft-Hartley law. It was completed too late for committee approval in the last Congress and was not published.

During its 15 years of life, TVA's relations with labor "have been relatively free of strife and discord," the report said. It listed these as the chief reasons:

1. TVA directors early adopted a work policy known as "force account," making the agency itself the employer for construction projects.
2. The management "has proven by its deeds that it is constantly striving to deal fair and square with labor."
3. "Labor has complete trust and faith in the motives of TVA."
4. The Tennessee Valley Trades and Labor Council is composed of "responsible unions."
5. Officers of the council are "real labor leaders, men of exceptional ability and character."
6. Both labor and management "know the value and meaning of cooperation."
7. TVA keeps the council fully informed of all things of interest to it.
8. TVA directors and officers dealing with labor policy "have on the whole been competent, intelligent and realistic individuals."

"There is nothing in the labor policies of TVA that smacks of paternalism," the report said.

Delayed Slum Program

Senator McCarran is unquestionably right in saying that Congress has set a poor example to the States in the matter of slum clearance. Some years ago it created the District Redevelopment Land Agency to clear the slums of the Nation's Capital and then denied it funds with which to operate. In the crush of postwar demands slum clearance was carelessly forgotten. Whatever explanation may be offered, there is no longer excuse for failure to start this work so closely related to the health and welfare of the community.

Chairman Mark Lansburgh of the land agency is seeking $3,400,000 for the next fiscal year. Apparently Senator McCarran thinks that sum is too small since appropriations up to 20 million dollars were authorized by the act. It seems to us that initiation of the program is more important than an enormous appropriation in the first year. Nor should anyone forget that the purchase of slum areas and the clearing of the land of disease-spreading shacks is only one phase of a much larger problem. Washington's slums are still tragically overcrowded. The first step toward this salutary transformation ought to be the construction of low-cost housing into which the occupants of slum areas to be redeveloped could be moved. If no such housing is provided, the result will be to intensify the congestion of the remaining slums, thus worsening the plight of slum dwellers in the immediate future instead of relieving it.

The importance of new low-rental housing to be undertaken along with slum clearance is magnified by the fact that some of the areas to be cleared are no longer suitable for residential purposes. The redevelopment will necessarily have to fit into over-all planning for the city as a whole. New low-cost housing really becomes, therefore, the first essential in any forthright assault upon the slums. That should mean reactivation of the National Capital Housing Authority in the construction field as soon as legislation for that purpose and the necessary controls over materials can be enacted.

How Much Socialization

The stock market paid no heed to the cries of alarm from those news commentators who concluded that the President's recommendations to Congress were the opening guns of a campaign having state socialism as its goal. Instead, the market brought an immediate upturn in stock market prices, while an impressive advance followed issuance of the economic report.

Admitting that Wall Street operators are often temperamental and given to snap judgments, they are quick to detect, and indeed to exaggerate, the effect of legislative programs that might adversely affect business. Although they naturally do not relish the prospect of increased corporation taxes, they are comforted by the omission of any appeal for reimposition of the excess profits tax. The President's requests for a tightening of controls over business were less drastic than earlier pronouncements had led the public to expect. Moreover, the President makes it clear that he hopes voluntary adjustments will obviate the need for invoking the requested mandatory controls over materials in short supply and over prices and wages.

As a matter of fact, the major part of the President's program concerns the retention and, in some cases, the expansion of existing controls and regulations. The New Deal, now an old deal, has undoubtedly effected a somewhat revolutionary transformation of our system of government, converting it from one of limited powers to one that affects the lives and fortunes of citizens in a multitude of ways. However, these fundamental changes in the relationship of the state to the people have become an integral feature of the existing economic system, accepted and supported by Republicans and Democrats alike. For instance, it is generally agreed that Social Security benefits should be expanded and increased. There is no effective demand for abolition of agricultural price controls. And most people realize that public aid is required to expedite construction of low-cost housing.

Of course, sharp differences arise concerning the scope, the timing and the details of these proposals. In respect to timing, especially, some of the President's recommendations are legitimate targets of attack. But the outstanding feature of the two messages is their general character. Most of the details of proposed legislation are left to the decision of a Congress that by no stretch of imagination can be called socialistic. Under the circumstances, the favorable response of Wall Street to the President's messages reflects a better understanding of underlying realities than gloomy predictions that the country, under the prodding of its Chief Executive, is heading for socialization of industry.

Bevin's Blockbuster

That Mr. Bevin is engaged in a personal war with Israel has long been apparent. The proof is evident even to a schoolboy in the deplorable clash on Saturday on the Egyptian frontier of Palestine. On December 30 the State Department, ignoring a British appeal to President Truman to reprove Israel, addressed a tactfully worded request for a definitive cease-fire to both Tel Aviv and Cairo. Both sides accepted, the Egyptians for the first time leaving out reservations. On January 6 Azzam Pasha, the Egyptian secretary of the Arab League, after a review for home consumption of Egyptian victories, said that the Egyptians had decided to bow to a cease-fire because of the American appeal. Everything was set for the cease-fire to take effect two days later, or Saturday morning.

An hour or so before the deadline, however, four British planes and one Egyptian plane appeared over Rafah, a base on the border spread, like Gortizia in Venezia, between two jurisdictions. The moment was as delicate as the place. The Israelis gave battle, and three British pilots, flying armed reconnaissance planes, were downed. Later another 12 British planes flew over the area to find out what had happened to the previous group, and two more were grounded. Three of the British pilots are presumed dead, and the others whose machines were destroyed were captured by the Israeli, presumably on Palestine territory. The British have responded with all the preliminaries—diplomatically at Lake Success and militarily in the Middle East—for a showdown with tiny Israel.

If anything were calculated to obstruct Israel-Egyptian agreement, it was this appearance of British aircraft. All along Tel Aviv has expressed fear of British interference. It warned the world ahead of time of British troop movements in the direction of Aqaba, Trans-Jordan port in the Red Sea. The report was stigmatized in London as propaganda, but in due course the reinforcements did arrive, as Tel Aviv had warned. The planes that came over Rafah, however, hailed from the Suez Canal Zone, and if the Egyptians requested this aid, they did not announce such request. Nor, of course, have the United Nations. The British seem to have acted on their own responsibility in launching a sightseeing tour of the worst danger zone at the most critical moment.

What were the British up to? The answer in the context of everything we have said on the situation in the Middle East is clear enough to this newspaper. Mr. Bevin is desperately anxious to insure his strategic position in the Middle East. It is a preoccupation against which Mr. Churchill has never ceased to inveigh. Last week he and Mr. Eden raised their voices against the dispatch of reinforcements. But Mr. Bevin, with what the London Observer yesterday called a "blustering persistence in error," has acquired an obsession that has become pathological. It looks as if he is a kind of Dr. Jameson, the Englishman who led an unofficial raid into the Boer Transvaal, and set the match to the South African War. If there is no settlement with Britain in the role of honest broker, then he will wreck it. He wants all the parties to be beholden to the British, so that he, acting in the interests of a nineteenth century concept of strategy, can insure an imperial overland line between the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf. Egypt may well ask to be saved from her friends in her present predicament, and the reaction in Israel, now holding its first elections, will be to encourage extremism. The United States simply cannot afford to be entangled with persons with brains located in their spleens, as Mr. Bevin is. It should press the cease-fire and a direct settlement without allowing itself to be deterred by the Israeli-British collision.

Atom Employees

Even the most indefatigable defender of civil rights must, we believe, accept the premise that security respecting employees of the Atomic Energy Commission comes in a special category. Ordinary Government security checks may not be adequate to cover atomic energy workers because of the overriding military interest in atomic energy today. Aside from whether any fundamental scientific "secret" is involved in the production of fissionable material, the fact is that in the present condition of world affairs, many of the production processes must remain highly classified. It is entirely within the national interest for the Atomic Energy Commission to take all genuinely necessary steps to protect such information.

Whether the 18 criteria listed by the commission for barring persons from secret work may be considered reasonable will be determined essentially by how they are applied. Certainly there is no such thing as a "right" to a job in atomic energy, and certainly the commission must be left discretion as to the qualifications of its employees. The instructions accompanying the criteria call for an over-all "common-sense judgment" in each individual case after all available information has been weighed, including the report of the FBI investigation. The determination to evaluate each case without fixed preconceptions is a good omen.

Causes for which applicants may be rejected fall into two categories, the first of which establishes a presumption of security risk. Included in this category are membership in organizations declared subversive by the Attorney General as well as habitual alcohol addiction and mental disorder. The second class is more tenuous and is considered merely as information to be weighed in possible appointments. It includes identification with subversive or front groups, conscientious objection to military service on other than religious grounds, and the inability to keep information confidential.

In any screening of this sort there is ground for tremendous abuse, especially in the application of many of the criteria to wives as well as to workers themselves. Some of the criteria have nothing to do with loyalty; in other words, it is perfectly possible for a person to be wholly loyal to the United States and still unacceptable as an atomic employee. The test of the rules will be the commission's ability to maintain this distinction. Memory is still fresh of the blundering performance of the State Department in stigmatizing a number of employees as "bad security risks"—a term which in the popular mind carried almost the same meaning as disloyalty. For the Atomic Energy Commission to repeat this performance could result in unjust and irreparable harm. At the very least, in discharge of this great responsibility the commission should take pains that no publicity is given or damaging notation made on the record of persons who for one reason or another are not qualified for atomic jobs and still may be perfectly loyal and acceptable candidates for other employment.

Bipartisan Policy

Senator Capehart advances the novel theory that the bipartisan foreign policy is dead, partly because President Truman failed to consult Senate Republicans on the nomination of Dean Acheson to be Secretary of State. The remainder of the Senator's remarks make it apparent that his wish was father to the thought. He was simply looking for an excuse to bury the bipartisan foreign policy, and we think he has found a very poor one.

The bipartisan foreign policy is an understanding that the two parties will work together to attain common ends on which both are agreed. Undoubtedly it puts upon the leaders of both parties an obligation to choose for the top positions dealing with foreign-relations men who are capable of working on a level above partisanship. But it does not imply that Republican legislators must be consulted as to the replacement of any Cabinet official. The Secretary of State is the President's special representative in conducting the Nation's foreign affairs. He must necessarily be responsible to the President alone. Similarly the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is responsible only to that committee and to the Senate. We do not recall that the President was consulted about the Republicans' appointment of Senator Vandenberg to head this committee two years ago.

Fortunately, Senator Taft, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, has announced that he may vote for Mr. Acheson. Senator Vandenberg had praised Mr. Acheson's ability while indicating an intention fully to explore his viewpoint in the process of confirmation. That is the duty of the Foreign Relations Committee. The Republicans on that committee have good reason to be irritated by the snatching of 8 of its 13 seats for Democratic Senators, in contrast to the 7-to-6 ratio under Republican control. But neither this nor any other grievance should be allowed to interfere with our bipartisan foreign policy. That policy was adopted to enhance our national security and promote our interest in world stability—not for the convenience or advantage of politicians on either side of the fence. Neither party can abandon it, or even weaken it, without rendering grave disservice to the country.

The Contrast

The Information Bulletin of the U. S. S. R., published by the Soviet Embassy here contains a statement by the President of the Russian Academy of Sciences which appears to clear up some of the differences between Marxist and capitalist science, which have recently been the source of a good deal of controversy.

Soviet science, it seems, "serves the interests of ordinary people," and its purposes are "peace, progress and democracy." In capitalist countries, however, the bourgeoisie "subordinate scientific research to... profiteering, oppressing the working masses, suppressing democracy." The whole world, the statement continues, "knows that science in the U. S. A. is being militarized and is subordinated to the aggressive plans of American imperialism."

We are glad to have this distinction made clear. But, it seems to us, that the President might have gone a bit farther and explained that bourgeois science starts with observation and classification of facts, and ends with the deduction of general laws or principles. The application of these laws to the purposes of oppressing the working masses with washing machines, television sets, electric refrigerators, vacuum cleaners and so on; and suppressing democracy by means of voting machines, loud-speaker systems and such diabolic devices, is usually called technology, or sometimes "applied science."

Soviet science, as we gather from the statement of the President, completely reverses this procedure. It starts with the desired ends, such as peace, progress and democracy, and manufactures the facts to fit them. This requires so much time and energy that rarely does the Soviet scientist get around to the business of exact observation.

Failure to understand this radical distinction between the capitalist and the socialist scientific methods doubtless explains why Western scientists (with certain distinguished exceptions, such as Dr. Allan Nunn May and Prof. Raymond Boyer) have been unable to observe much peace, progress or democracy in the Sovietized countries. They have actually been going about the job backward.

Letters To The Editor

Far Eastern Commission

In the interests of accurate public information I should like to bring to your attention several errors of fact in the letter by Admiral Zacharias published in The Washington Post of January 3.

1. The admiral says "the Far Eastern Commission is a policy-making body for the whole Far East."

The facts: The Far Eastern Commission is "an international body" by explicit provision of its terms of reference, a policy-making body for Japan only. And by the terms of the Potsdam Declaration Japanese sovereignty is "limited to the islands of Honshu, Hokkaido, Kyushu, Shikoku" and such minor islands as may be determined.

2. The admiral says the Far Eastern Commission is "an international body supposedly administering the peace with Japan which we have gained from her surrender."

The facts: The Far Eastern Commission is not an administrative agency. Its function is "to formulate the policies, principles and standards in conformity with which the fulfillment by Japan of its obligations under the terms of surrender may be accomplished." General MacArthur is the administrative authority in Japan and is responsible for implementing Far Eastern Commission policies. In the absence of a treaty there is, of course, no "peace with Japan" to be administered.

3. The admiral says "Mr. [Samuel S.] Stratton is now employed by the Far Eastern Commission" and that "although he has signed his letter from Schenectady, N. Y., he is really a postwar Washingtonian."

The facts: After 2½ years of distinguished service with the commission, during nearly two of which he served as deputy secretary general, Mr. Stratton resigned in September, 1948, to accept an appointment to the philosophy faculty of Union College. He has been living in Schenectady ever since.

DAVID K. EICHLER, Deputy Secretary General, Far Eastern Commission, Washington.

Social Review Of 1948

Included in your issue of January 3 was a special section devoted to an appraisal of our economic system as it functioned in 1948. Since I am majoring in economics, I found this feature exceptionally interesting.

However, after some reflection, the question, "Is not this prodigious survey a function of American materialism," posed itself to me. I looked in vain to find some other reason why your newspaper (and the New York Times of that same day) had assumed that the majority of its readers would be especially concerned with a tieing together of last year's economic threads instead of a resume of our progress along community adjustment lines.

Why had it not behooved you to glean from the records the significance of the marriage to divorce ratio, the fluctuations in the crime rate, the progress curve in psychology, national health and education standards, the interest rate slum area clearance programs paid to their respective communities, and the balance sheet for the present condition of our moral and religious dispositions?

Such a report would, of course, be more vulnerable to attack, but the very instigation of these controversies would justify the effort put into it. This aspect of our community life should be approached with, at least, the same zealotry and circumspection that you exercised in your economic report. LOUIS STANLEY PAIGE, Washington.

Mr. Young's Speech

Please exclude me from those whom you say were deeply humiliated by Commissioner Young's speech. On the contrary, I am proud to know that Washington has an official with sufficient courage to speak his mind openly and directly in the city's interest even at the sacrifice of his personal favor with those holding reins over his office.

The Commissioner was presented with the rare opportunity of reaching the collective ear of those with authority to answer the city's needs. By using that opportunity to present those needs rather than dissipate it in fatuous amenities, the Commissioner performed a distinct public service for which he is to be highly commended. JOSEPH ROTWEIN, Washington.

Chiang And The Communists

I decline to serve as Mr. Emmanuel Larsen's clay pigeon (The Washington Post January 3). My December 27 letter was concerned with how we can effectively defeat communism in China.

As a Christian minister I am opposed to communism. However, I resist the thought that anyone who opposes communism, as Chiang is, is thereby righteously; or that anyone who identifies an opponent of communism is therefore defending the Communists.

Our problem is to look upon the Chinese Communist threat as the Chinese themselves must see it—to see it as a man does who lives under the failing, corrupt National government—then, and only then, to present our arguments for democracy in terms which they will understand—not in terms of another gold shipment to bolster an already lead currency, or to outfit more troops that they may also surrender to the Communists.

Mr. Larsen mentions accurately that 17 of the 31 Communist leaders have been trained in Moscow. But Chiang was also trained there, and in Japan, and his army was trained by the men who formed Hitler's armies; and his son, recent economic czar of Shanghai, spent many years in Moscow.

Yes, the Bolton report is right: "It was Russia who organized the Communist Party (in China)... beginning 25 years ago." But under whose sanctions? That of the Kuomintang—the leaders of the Chinese Republic—Sun Yat-sen and Chiang Kai-shek, among others.

Nothing is further from the truth than the statement that "the United States has repeatedly broken its solemn pledges to provide the government of China with arms and ammunition while Chiang has always fulfilled his commitments." The State Department report of December 17 refutes the first part of this (and notes that some items were calculated in this fashion: C-46 planes costing over $750,000 each were charged off at $500,000 each). Chiang has broken so many pledges: to fulfill promises to reform his government, to take military action to extend government beyond the close one-party tyranny, that this statement by Mr. Larsen is incredible. Anatomy Of Despair

EXISTENCE AND THE EXISTENT, the Christian answer by Jacques Maritain; translated by Lewis Galantiere and Gerald B. Phelan. (Pantheon Books, $3.)

About a dozen years ago Prof. Johan Huizinga predicted that the new intellectual craze would be for something called existentialism. Not many oracles, I dare say, have the satisfaction of finding their words so perfectly fulfilled. The existentialist cult continues to wax, and now and then to provide newspaper headlines or matter for weekly picture magazines. It seems likely to survive the savage attack lately launched upon it by Dr. Guido de Ruggiero, the celebrated Italian ontologist, who died only a few days ago. The Vatican has deemed the cult important and dangerous enough to be noticed, and has placed all the books of its best known exponent, M. Jean-Paul Sartre, on the Index Librorum Prohibitorum. In the present work, M. Maritain, the eminent French Thomist, undertakes to distinguish between "atheistic existentialism," as represented by M. Sartre and his disciples, and the "Christian existentialism" of which M. Maritain warmly approves; but he succeeds in making them so utterly dissimilar, that the question becomes merely one of to whom title existentialist, for whatever it may be worth, rightfully belongs.

The real founder of the existentialism which is getting so much attention nowadays, and whose terminology have been quietly appropriated by the more cerebral sort of literary critics, was of course not Sartre, nor even his master Heidegger, but the Danish eccentric, Soeren Kierkegaard, who died about the middle of the nineteenth century. Thus its origin at least was anything but atheistic, for Kierkegaard was an intensely and perhaps morbidly religious man. He held, however, that logic or rational proofs of Christianity are without validity in a temporal universe. Since it is impossible for the philosopher to separate himself from this universe, all efforts to prove a correspondence between objective being and abstract ideas must lead in the end to pantheism. Philosophical systems are therefore a hindrance rather than aid to religion, inasmuch as they mislead us about the nature of religious experience. The search for truth must start with the recognition by the Christian of his existence in time and of his separation from eternity, and thus comes the further recognition of the futility of seeking an objective knowledge of God. From this results the crisis within the soul from which there is no escape save through faith. In short, the realization of one's existence in time is equivalent to the "conviction of sin" which is preliminary to redemption. For Kierkegaard, however, faith is not faith unless it does violence to reason. The only proper object of faith is that which is absurd.

Now the existentialism of Kierkegaard was actually a revolt of religion against metaphysics, and in particular against Hegelian idealism, as M. Maritain calls it. But Kierkegaard made use of the premises and the dialectic of the very system he sought to overthrow. It was thus, says M. Maritain, that the academic philosophers against whom the attack was directed were ironically able to capture existentialism and to erect an elaborate new metaphysical system upon it. This system, M. Maritain tells us, was "an ideological and radical caricature of the absurd, cleverly disguised behind a few human analyses and phenomenological parentheses" which ended in a complete negation of the Kierkegaardian doctrine; or, to use the erudite language of our professor, in a "complete philosophical liquidation of the basic realities and radical changes of the person and subjectivity." In a word, the new existentialism has destroyed the existent. For this reason, it appears, the existentialists have forfeited any right to name they have adopted.

It is at this point that M. Maritain's favorite villain, Rene Descartes, turns up in the piece. Both the Kierkegaardian attack on philosophy and the philosophic abolition of Kierkegaard's theology are possible because of what M. Maritain describes as Descartes' "philosophical imperialism." Descartes in claiming for philosophy the whole field of truth and knowledge annexed the provinces of theology. But the end result of this tendency, which found its most audacious expression in the panlogism of Hegel, was the creation of a new theology, or rather, as M. Maritain calls it, of an "atheology." In other words atheism is now the point of departure for such contemporary philosophies as the rationalistic Marxism and the anti-rationalistic existentialism, precisely as theology itself was for scholastic philosophy before the thirteenth century. Just as Thomism then rescued philosophy from its servitude to Kierkegaard's theology and the Augustinian tradition and reestablished its autonomy within its proper frontiers, so now it can rescue philosophy from servitude to atheism.

Thomism, argues M. Maritain, is the true existentialism because it begins like Kierkegaard with the fact of existence and the intuition of existing things. From these it proceeds, through abstraction, to a knowledge of essences of which Kierkegaard was incapable, because his thought had been imprisoned behind "the wall of insuperable emptiness" that Cartesian rationalism has erected between intellect and mystery. It is this emptiness, M. Maritain tells us, which explains the "fundamental inhumanity" of modern civilization.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Acheson, Truman and Vandenberg

IN THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT, a new appointment as important as that of Secretary of State is like the introduction of a new and powerful chemical into a complicated and delicately balanced formula. All sorts of subsidiary reactions are bound to take place. The most interesting and important of the reactions to the appointment of Dean G. Acheson will be its effects on the White House and on the Congress.

Acheson is distinctly the personal choice of President Harry S. Truman for Secretary of State. In part, of course, the appointment was a consequence of a process of elimination—the choice of Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson or of Justice William O. Douglas would have disrupted the Supreme Court, and W. Averell Harriman's Wall Street background was thought to be a political disadvantage. In part, too, the objective conclusion was reached that Acheson, by experience and ability, was preeminently fitted for the post.

But an even more compelling reason, according to those who should know, was simply that the President likes Acheson very much personally. Admires him greatly, and is certain that he can work with him closely and successfully. This in itself suggests one change which is likely to take place in the relationship between the White House and the State Department.

UNTIL NOW, Truman's role in the making of foreign policy has been with few exceptions confined to an almost automatic approval of what his Secretary of State was doing. This will be no longer. Truman has no intention of becoming his own Secretary of State. But he does intend that the final authority should be definitely and clearly his. And it was largely for this reason that he appointed as Secretary a man with whom he was certain that a successful working relationship could be established.

This does not mean, of course, that the basic direction of American policy will be altered. Aside from Truman's own testimony and the appointment of Acheson, himself one of the chief architects of the policy of firmness toward the Soviet Union, the most striking evidence on this point is Truman's attitude toward Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

Forrestal has been one of the chief targets of those who have been calling on the President to "stop the cold war" by turning over most of the world to the Soviet Union. Reports have emanated from these sources that Forrestal will be asked to resign soon after Marshall leaves. In fact, it can be stated on undoubted authority that Truman has let Forrestal know that he is deeply grateful for the service Forrestal has rendered, and that he wants Forrestal to stay as long as he can be prevailed upon to do so.

Yet, though the President is in no mood for appeasing either the Soviet Union or the admirers of Henry Wallace, the appointment of Acheson is fortunate for the country, in view of Truman's well-known impulsiveness. For Acheson has a deep and hard-earned understanding of the real nature of the conflict between the Soviet Union and the western world. The President occasionally seems tempted to believe that he can resolve the conflict by pulling a rabbit out of his hat. Acheson knows that he cannot, and the President is pretty certain to rely on Acheson's judgment, in which he has great confidence.

YET THERE is no assurance that the successful relationship which seems to be in prospect between the State Department and the White House will also evolve between the State Department and the Congress. Two great issues will soon confront the Congress. One is the North Atlantic Pact, designed to form the keystone of American foreign policy. The other is the rearmament of western Europe, without which the pact will have no meaning.

Clearly, both measures will require Republican support. Yet the plain fact is that the bipartisan basis of foreign policy has been most gravely weakened. One reason is simply the imminent departure of Marshall and Robert A. Lovett, with whom the Republican foreign policy leaders, and especially Senator Arthur Vandenberg, have developed an intimate understanding. By contrast, the relationship between Vandenberg and Acheson, who have had serious policy differences in the past, is one of mutual, but distinctly chilly, respect.

Bipartisanship has always been weakened by the small-minded action of the Senate Democrats in reducing the Republican representation on the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee. This has caused the Republicans angrily to suspect that the Administration has decided since the election to freeze them out of foreign policy. In fact, it can be said with assurance that Truman has no such intention, and that the White House had absolutely nothing to do with the Foreign Affairs Committee action. Even so, Acheson will certainly need all his energy and ability to rebuild and preserve the structure and bipartisanship which has been one of the major achievements of those great public servants, George G. Marshall, Robert A. Lovett and Arthur Vandenberg.

Dr. Pike to Become Chaplain Of Columbia on September 1

The Rev. James A. Pike, former curate of St. John's Church, Lafayette sq., will become chaplain of Columbia University on September 1. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower announced yesterday.

Dr. Pike, who holds a doctorate in law from Yale Law School, was an attorney in the office of the general counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington from 1938 until 1942. He was also founder of the law firm of Pike & Fischer. He lectured on Federal procedure at Catholic University School of Law in 1938, and from 1939 to 1942 lectured on civil procedure at the George Washington University School of Law. He served in the Navy for three years, and was assigned as attorney for the Maritime Commission and the Shipping Administration here.

Dr. Pike began his study for holy orders under the Rev. W. F. Smith, then canon of the Washington Cathedral. He was ordained deacon in 1944 and priest in 1946 by the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington. In addition to serving as curate of St. John's, he was chaplain to Episcopal students at George Washington University.

He prepared for the Episcopal priesthood at Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, and General Theological Seminary in New York. He has been at Christ Church, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., since November, 1946, serving as rector since January, 1947.

Speaking on "Social Progress in America" before the Youth Fellowship, Mr. Catchings said the platform of President Truman and members of the Eighty-first Congress reveal that many Americans are anxious for social reforms.

The people are asking for basic improvements in the conditions and opportunities for minority groups, he continued. Many churches and church leaders, by insisting that no country is stronger than its weakest group, are urging the removal of all artificial barriers between people. They have aided in bringing the American people to their present conviction, he said.

At Presentation of Vercelli Medal...

FOR EFFORT—William Henry Collins (center), Washington lawyer, last night was awarded the Vercelli Medal for 1949 for outstanding work in the Holy Name Society.

Greeks Hear Last Talks of New Patriarch

Athenagoras I, who will become Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church late this month, yesterday spoke for the last time at two Greek Orthodox churches in Washington.

In the morning the Patriarch-elect spoke at the Church of Saints Constantine and Helen, 6th and C sts. nw., and last night at St. Sofia, 1103 8th st. nw.

Archbishop Athenagoras said last night that he will be enthroned in Istanbul, Turkey, sometime this month, but the exact date has not yet been set. It will be immediately after his arrival there, he said.

He will fly there in the Sacred Cow, the plane formerly used by Presidents Roosevelt and Truman. The Patriarch said that President Truman offered him use of the plane when he visited Truman at the White House late last year.

Members of the joint committee of the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America, which the prelate has headed since 1931, will accompany him on the flight.

The Patriarch, first American citizen elected to the office, must become a Turkish citizen when he takes office. The visit here was one of a number of pastoral visits he is making throughout the country before leaving for Istanbul.

In his sermons, Archbishop Athenagoras hailed the inauguration of President Truman and prayed for his health.

He praised President Truman for his leadership in launching the Truman Doctrine of aid to Greece and Turkey, and said he was grateful for America's sympathy toward Turkey. He also praised the Marshall Plan and expressed the hope that Secretary of State Marshall would soon be in good health.

The Patriarch urged his hearers to become good American citizens and to enjoy the privileges of citizenship. He called upon them to participate in the "American mission for America and for humanity."

Holy Name Society Presents Vercelli Medal to W. H. Collins

William Henry Collins, Washington lawyer and active Catholic layman of the Archdiocese of Washington, last night was awarded the Vercelli Medal for 1949, given annually to the most outstanding man in the Holy Name Society.

The presentation was made by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, who said he drew "singular happiness" in conferring the medal on Collins.

In the citation read by the Rev. Harry C. Graham, O.P., national director of the Holy Name Society, Collins was praised as "an outstanding citizen and public servant of our Nation's Capital."

"You have merited the respect and admiration of all men for your fearless and conscientious prosecution of its civil laws," the citation stated.

In his response, following the presentation of the medal, Collins paid tribute to the late Rt. Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. Gavin of the Sacred Heart Church for starting him in the work of the Holy Name Society.

"I accept this medal," he said, "not as a personal tribute to me for my efforts on behalf of the society but rather as a timely and much deserved tribute to all the spiritual directors, all the officers past and present, and to the entire membership of the unions of Baltimore and Washington."

The Vercelli Medal was presented to Collins during ceremonies in Carroll Hall, 924 G st. nw. The award is named after Blessed John of Vercelli, who lived in the thirteenth century and founded the Holy Name Society on instructions from Pope Gregory X.

Collins, who is married and has two sons, lives at 1429 Locust rd. nw. He was president of the Holy Name Society of Washington-Baltimore area from 1937 to 1939. This area organization was later separated into two units.

The meeting will be held at 8 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center, 1529 16th st. nw. Rabbi Solomon H. Metz of Adas Israel Congregation and Nadine Cherner, who has recently returned from the State of Israel, will also speak.

Record Firms To Put Out Smaller Discs

New York, Jan. 9 (NYHT).—Twenty-four hours before RCA Victor was scheduled to introduce a new 45-revolutions-a-minute phonograph record, measuring only 6 1/2 inches in width, Columbia Records, Inc., announced today that it, too, would start producing a disc measuring 7 inches across and geared to the microgroove speed of 33 1/3 revolutions a minute.

Both companies have been striving to find the most acceptable replacement for the standard 78-revolutions-a-minute, 12-inch record. The new small discs will contain as much music and play as long as the 12-inches.

It was learned that Victor would introduce a new record-playing apparatus, geared to 45 rpm. and equipped with a special changing device which can change records more rapidly than is now possible.

Expert on Arctic Gets Fellowship At Georgetown U.

Svend Frederiksen, a native of Greenland and specialist in the field of Eskimology—history and culture of the inhabitants of the Arctic and sub-Arctic regions—has been awarded a teaching fellowship at Georgetown University. The Rev. Hunter Guthrie Dean of the graduate school, announced yesterday.

Frederiksen will begin a series of lectures on the geography and terrain of the Arctic regions and the art of survival in these territories for graduate students during the spring term.

He completed most of the work for his doctorate at the University of Copenhagen, Father Guthrie announced, and studied as a fellow of the Rockefeller Foundation in 1946.

Survey Shows Workers Are Healthy Lot

Pittsburgh, Jan. 9 (AP).—A two-year cross-section survey of industry's health facilities showed today that American workers are a healthy lot.

The field study, covering an industrial population of 1,180,551 employees from 277 plants in 33 States was conducted by Dr. C. O. Sappington of Chicago, for the Mellon Institute's industrial hygiene foundation.

Sappington and his men found that about 54 per cent of the unnamed plants studied had industrial hygiene services in some form—the maintenance of healthful working conditions and prevention of health hazards through environmental control by chemists and engineers.

Greatest strides were made during the last 10 years because of the war accelerated industrial hygiene activities.

The report also found room for improvement. It suggested:

- (1) Increased confidence and respect between medicine and management;
- (2) fewer differences in various health programs;
- (3) better understanding of the terms "industrial hygiene," "industrial safety," and "industrial sanitation";
- (4) a higher regard for the importance of prevention by professional personnel; and
- (5) more time to be devoted by physicians and nurses to acquire first-hand knowledge of processes and materials.

268 Cases, 8 Polio Deaths in D. C. Area

In the Greater Washington area 268 cases of polio were reported during the year resulting in the deaths of 8 persons. The figure was nearly five times last year's total of 56.

Cases reported in the District numbered 135 while the nearby Maryland and Virginia total reached 133. The first case of polio in the area was reported on June 29, 1948, the last on December 18, 1948.

It's all a matter of taste, said the old lady as she kissed the cow. So it was at the Corcoran Gallery yesterday, where this idea was put more classically—to wit: De gustibus non disputandum est. Which means, of course: "There is no disputing of tastes."

To illustrate all this, the gallery at 17th st. and New York ave. showed American paintings representing "a century of taste and criticism."

Nearly 500 persons attended the public opening. The show will conclude February 20.

Larger Paintings Attract

Pictures range from John Quidor's "The Money Diggers" (1832), illustrating a scene from Washington Irving's writings, to Karl Knaths' ultra modern still life, "Mexican Platter" (1948).

The first noticeable aspect of taste was that small paintings received little or no attention from the visitors. It was the large paintings that caught and held their attention.

The second generality was that it was the pictures of the middle years of the century that seemed most popular. The earliest paintings, and even more the ultra modern were seemingly of less interest.

"It is the sentiment that gets them, and a certain nostalgia," theorized a gallery attendant. Frederick Edwin Church's large painting of Niagara Falls (1857) interested many, but its obvious realism yesterday did not hold attention.

Of it, a contemporary art critic had rhapsodized, "the glint of the water, the mist, the sweep, curve, dash, spray, foam, rocks and iris (of the rainbow) all are reproduced in forceful and vivid tints."

Realism Impressed Ruskin

Ruskin, the then reigning English art pundit, when he saw it, went to the window and looked out to make sure the rainbow was not a reflection, according to Miss Eleanor B. Swenson, assistant curator, who spent more than a year preparing the show.

In contrast to "Niagara Falls," which won a prize at the Paris exposition of 1887, was Whistler's "White Girl" (1882). Much admired yesterday, Whistler's work was described at the time as a "bizarre production" and "one of the most incomplete paintings we have ever met with."

Then there was Albert Bierstadt's "Mount Corcoran" (1875), named by the artist after the man who commissioned the painting, William Wilson Corcoran, founder of the gallery.

An onlooker yesterday described it as "calendar art," but it pleased two little girls mightily—because there was a bear coming down to drink from a mountain pool.

FBI Nabs 3 Men In North Carolina Bank Burglary

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 9 (AP).—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents arrested three men today on charges of burglarizing the Aulander branch of the Bank of Aholkie, N. C., of $31,786.65.

E. C. Richardson, special agent in charge of the Norfolk office of the FBI, said agents had recovered some $8000 in cash and about $7000 in merchandise the men admitted they bought with the loot. The robbery occurred on December 30.

Those arrested were identified as Joseph Williamson Pacini, Jr., 27, of Lynnhaven, Va.; Linwood Irwin Mears, 35, of Norfolk, and Wiloughby Edward Murray, 28, of Aholkie, N. C. Richardson said Pacini and Mears admitted they burglarized the bank.

FBI agents here, unshaven and red eyed from lack of sleep, had the men under surveillance for several days prior to their arrest early this morning.

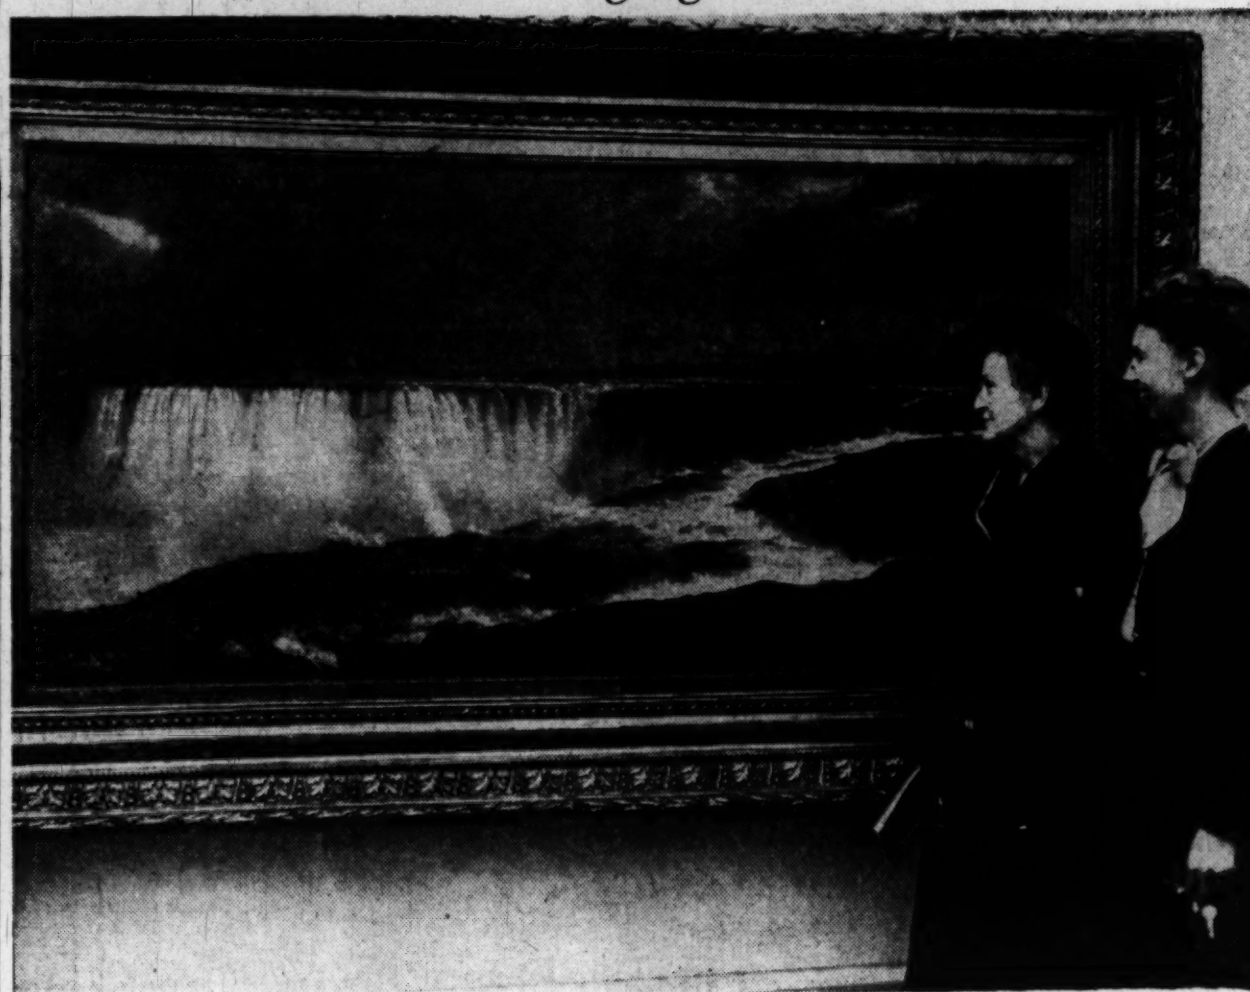

13 Congressmen Invited to Attend AVC Reception

Thirteen members of Congress who are members of the American Veterans Committee will be guests of the Washington Chapter and the Press-Radio Wing at a reception from 3 to 6 p. m. Saturday at their clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw.

The two Senators and 11 Representatives will be asked to discuss their plans for the coming session at a press conference during the reception.

The Congressmen invited to attend are: Senators Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) and Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.); Representatives Harold D. Donohue (D., Mass.) Henry M. Jackson (D., Wash.), James G. Fulton (R., Pa.), George A. Smathers (D., Fla.), Sidney Yates (D., Ill.), Peter W. Rodino (D., N. J.), Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.), John A. Carroll (D., Colo.), John A. Blatnik (D., Minn.), Hugh J. Addonizio (D., N. J.) and Richard Bolling (D., Mo.).

Corcoran Exhibit Shows Changing Taste in Art

DATED—A century of taste and criticism in American painting is illustrated in an exhibition which opened yesterday at Corcoran Gallery. This work, Niagara Falls, by Frederick E. Church (1857), was praised for its realism in its day. Mrs. Edward Bruce, 2900 Connecticut ave. nw. (left) and Miss Eleanor B. Swenson, assistant curator, find it dated. Said Mrs. Bruce: "With today's photography there is no reason to paint that way now"

RESPONSIVE CHORD—Martha, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Niepold, of 605 S. Lee st., Alexandria, points out the bear coming to drink at a mountain pool to Joan Reading, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Reading, 3100

Connecticut ave. nw. The painting is Mount Corcoran, by Albert Bierstadt (1875). Martha was so pleased with the bear that she jumped up and down. Others called the painting "calendar art"

APPRECIATED AT LAST—White Girl, a painting by Whistler (1862) doesn't appear unconventional to Miss Barbara Kruger, of New York, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Berman, of 3100 Connecticut ave. nw. When the picture was first exhibited, people laughed at it

20,000 Seats For Armory Advocated

Arthur J. Bergman, managing director of the National Guard Armory, yesterday looked forward to the day when the giant structure may hold as many as 20,000 persons.

On the Washington Board of Trade's radio program, "Your Town," over WTOP, Bergman said the present seating capacity of 5300 should be increased as soon as possible by making the required changes to conform with the District's egress laws.

Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade, said the revenues from commercial use of the huge building will not be adequate for maintenance expenses, though the objective is to make it as self-supporting as possible.

Leonard P. Walsh, chairman of the Armory Board, pointed out that Congress declared the Armory is primarily for the use of the District militia, and secondarily for conventions, sporting events and concerts. However, the National Guard is cooperating fully and has held drills elsewhere in cases of conflict with some public event, he added.

McGarraghy said a minimum of 10 additional large national conventions could be attracted to Washington each year if the Armory were enlarged to somewhere near its potential limits. This would add to the Armory's operating fund and bring in an estimated 10 million dollars in extra business to Washington merchants, he said.

Yacht Given Sheik of Kuwait

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 9 (AP). A gold-trimmed, 195-foot yacht was reported en route today to the Sheik of Kuwait as a gift in appreciation of the granting of oil concessions in Arabia.

The vessel left here yesterday after one million dollars was spent in refitting it.

A group of American oil companies were reported to be giving the luxurious ship to the Sheik because he is permitting them to drill for oil in his small Arabian country on the Persian Gulf.

The vessel, now known as the M. Y. Ahmady, formerly was G. Allan Hancock's research cruiser Velero III.

Teacher and Pupil Win Top Places in Midget Plane Races

Miami, Fla., Jan. 9 (AP).—An Oshkosh, Wis., school teacher and his 24-year-old pupil zoomed to first and second place victories today in the midget plane races at the Miami All-American Air Maneuvers.

Steve J. Wittman, physics and mathematics teacher, won the 24-mile race at an average speed of 176.867 miles an hour, finishing the course in 8 minutes and 8.5 seconds.

Wittman, flying a plane he designed, won a cash prize of $1900. Defending Champion Bill Brennan, also of Oshkosh, who learned midget flying under Wittman, roared to second place only 7.5 seconds behind his "teacher."

Brennan, with an average speed of 174.193 miles an hour, captured second prize money of $1100. The national aerobatics contest was won by stunt flier Beverly Howard, Charlotte, N. C., who chalked up 627.2 points in putting his light plane through a required number of spins, rolls and other maneuvers with expert precision. Betty Skelton, 22-year-old Tampa, Fla., aviatix, retained the women's aerobatics crown she won last year by scoring 475 points today.

Along Our Street with Aunt Penny

On my way to the market this morning, I noticed a telephone truck parked in front of Jane Paul's house. I wasn't surprised when Jane called this afternoon to say she'd gotten her telephone.

She said she is on a party line, the same as I am. The telephone installer had explained that about seven out of every ten families with telephones are on party lines. Jane said if it weren't for party-line service, she would have had to wait a lot longer for her telephone.

That reminded me of something I was reading in the newspaper last night about the telephone company's construction and improvement program. The news article said that "in spite of the rapid progress being made on this program, some people are still waiting for telephones." It went on to say that "the company was making the widest possible use of party-line facilities because party lines mean more service for more people, sooner."

Mangrum, Demaret Monti, Gibson All Even

Los Angeles, Jan. 9 (AP)—Battling sweeping cold winds, rain and hail, four golfers wound up in a tie for first place today at the end of the third round of the $15,000 Los Angeles Open Tournament. The four, tied at 214, with the final 18 holes scheduled for tomorrow were: Lloyd Mangrum, 22, 66, 76; Leland Gibson, Kansas City, 74, 73, 67; Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., 70, 74, 70; Eric Monti, Santa Monica, Calif., 71, 67, 76.

The Washington Post Sports

This Morning

With Shirley Povich
IT WAS GOOD fun at the Touchdown Club dinner when Gen. Clifton Cates, commandant of all the Marines, summoned Bill Fischer, the Notre Dame captain, for presentation of the award as the outstanding lineman of college football in 1948. "Hold up your right hand," commanded General Cates. "These awards are not to be won easily. While I have you up here, Bill Fischer, I'm swearing you in as a member of the United States Marines. We can use your kind."

POVICH Star General Vandenberg told the assembled 800 touchdowners. "I'm proud to present this trophy to the Michigan coach but with Cates around I'm afraid taking a chance on being sworn in as a Marine private. It looks as if General Cates has the concession around here."

THERE WERE speeches by the high military, the brass and the braid, and the Supreme Court justices and the Cabinet people but it remained for a football player, an old pro at that, to sound the finest note of the night. He was Otto Graham, the quarter back of the Cleveland Browns, who was voted the outstanding player of the All-American Conference, and his was the worthiest of the speeches from the dais. "I wish the people of this country and the world had the philosophy of our Cleveland football team," said Graham. "We don't rate our fellows on their background or the religion or parentage or color. We have Protestants, Jews, Catholics, white players and Negro players in our gang and it's a happy one."

THE REDSKINS didn't deny that they had proffered the job to Conzelman, though they tried to laugh it off. What they discovered was that they were bidding against the Boston Yankees who also had communicated with the ex-coach of the Cardinals, and they couldn't sign him cheaply. But Conzelman was interested in the Redskins' offer, and left the door open. Asked if he had flatly rejected the job, he said, "the answer to that would have to be no." When he quit the Cardinals he assumed he was retreating from public life, but that he was compelled to listen to any attractive offer to return to coaching.

NATURALLY ENOUGH, the question of why Conzelman would leave the red-hot Cardinals to accept another coaching post is asked. The Redskins, perennial profit makers, offer more of a financial reward than the Cardinals who for years have been losing money. Conzelman admitted that income would be a consideration in any move he made. Washington has a special attraction for Conzelman, however. He likes the town. In eight years as a guest of the Touchdown Club dinner he has been thrown into intimate association with important people, Supreme Court judges, Cabinet officers, Senators and Congressmen. He numbers them among his friends, would like to settle down amid them he has confessed.

Misunderstanding, Club Says

McKenley Off to Australia As Jersey AAU Considers Ban

Long Branch, N. J., Jan. 9 (AP)—Herb McKenley, holder of the 400-meter world record, left for Australia last night, while the New Jersey AAU considered a request for his suspension. The suspension request came from National AAU Secretary Dan Ferris, who said McKenley failed to fulfill an agreement to be in Australia yesterday for races next weekend. Art Wisner, secretary of the Long Branch A. C., under whose colors McKenley runs, declared today that the whole thing was a misunderstanding. He said the AAU should have negotiated McKenley's Australian appearance through the club, and if it had there would have been no conflict of dates. McKenley was to have run in the Knights of Columbus meet in Brooklyn last night. He did not compete. Ferris said, in asking the New Jersey AAU to suspend McKenley, that the Jamaica speedster would not arrive in Australia before January 14, "without much sleep for four days and therefore in no condition to run." Wisner replied that McKenley had been training hard during a recent visit to his home in Jamaica, British West Indies, and that he will be "all right" to race.

Only Seven Undeaten Teams Left

New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—College basketball's unbeaten club is really getting exclusive. Only seven major members are in good standing today. Five others were blackballed during the week for suffering first defeats.

Western Kentucky stands at the top of the list with a 10-0 record following by St. Louis, Minnesota, Hamline, and Akron with 9-0 each. Villanova with 8-0, and Cincinnati with 6-0. Army, idle since its December opener, was booted out of the select circle by Brown yesterday 47-42. Duquesne, Lawrence Tech, Mississippi and North Carolina were bounced out during the week. Even the boys in the once-beaten class are getting snobbish. A heavy week's schedule, including widespread conference warfare, saw the list trimmed down considerably.

Among the powers with only one loss charged against them are Columbia (4-1), Duquesne (7-1), Illinois (10-1), Kentucky (8-1), LaSalle (9-1), Loyola of Chicago (10-1), Mississippi (4-1), North Carolina (8-1), Ohio State (6-1), St. Bonaventure (8-1), San Francisco (12-1), Utah (10-1), and Washington State (15-1). Here's the way the conferences shape up today:

IVY LEAGUE: League—Columbia and Princeton, 1-0 each. Yale, 2-1. All games—Columbia, 4-1, and Dartmouth, 9-2, have the best all-games records.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE: League—William and Mary, 3-0; Duke, North Carolina and N. C. State 2-0 each; Furman, 1-0. All games—North Carolina 8-1, William and Mary 12-2, Duke 7-2.

SOUTHEASTERN CONFERENCE: League—Alabama, 3-0; Kentucky and Louisiana State, 2-0 each; Tennessee, 1-0. All games—Kentucky, 4-1; Mississippi, 4-1; Tulane, 12-2; Alabama, 7-2; Vanderbilt, 5-2; Georgia, 8-3; Tennessee, 7-3.

SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE: League—Texas and Baylor, 2-0 each; all games—Texas, 11-2; Baylor, 7-6.

BIG NINE: League—Illinois, 2-0; Purdue, Ohio State and Minnesota, 1-0 each. All games—Minnesota, 9-0; Illinois, 10-1; Ohio State, 6-1; Indiana, 8-2; Michigan, 7-2; Iowa 7-2; Purdue, 7-3.

PACIFIC COAST CONFERENCE: NORTH: League—Washington State, 2-0; Oregon State, Washington and Idaho, 1-1 each. All games—Washington State, 15-1; Oregon State, 10-6.

N. C. State Court Star Quits School

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 9 (AP)—Coach Everett Case of North Carolina State College tonight disclosed that Eddie Bartels, star basketball guard, has temporarily withdrawn from school. Bartels was dropped from the squad on State's recent ill-fated tour of the West because of a training rules infraction. Case said Bartels was definitely through for the season. "But we hope to have him back next year," Case added. "Eddie's out of school now because of a scholastic deficiency, but he's going to apply for readmission to State in the spring term."

Against Sooners N. C. Learns It Doesn't Pay To Advertise

By Morris Siegel
NEXT TIME North Carolina goes to the Sugar Bowl game its rosters will probably bypass the highway leading from Biloxi, Miss., to New Orleans. . . . Spotting the caravan of Carolina cars bearing "Choo-Choo Justice" and "All-the-Way Charlie" signs, Oklahoma Coach Bud Wilkinson ordered his squad to sit on the porch of their Biloxi hotel for three consecutive afternoons where they saw practically nothing except the Carolina parade advertising Justice. . . . "It got the boys riled up," said Wilkinson later, "and they were really beating down on Charlie during the game". . . . The Baltimore Colts gave Lu Gambino a football for Christmas. "We told him to practice holding it from now until next August," Business Manager Walter Driskill explained. "Maybe he won't fumble as much next fall". . . . Henry Armstrong, who was dealt out of his "piece" of Smuggly Hurd when the local middleweight was going good, is once again part owner of the Smug, who's been having rough sledding lately. . . .

Marlboro Soccer Player Kicks Goal For Opponents

Jackie Wyvill of Marlboro pulled a Roy Riegels yesterday and kicked a goal for his OSIA opponents in a Washington and Suburban Soccer League game. But OSIA didn't need the help, as it went on to a 10-3 victory over Marlboro. Center Forward Bill Gonzales booted five of the winner's goals.

Buck and Paul Simons each connected for a pair of goals to lead Sugar Radio to a 5-0 shutout of Rockville. Maryland Sports Club blanked Indianhead, 10-0. Pan-American defeated Glasva, 5-3, and Martin's Bakery won, 3-0, over Washington-French in other league games played yesterday. Charles County reached the quarterfinals of the Stewart Cup elimination by defeating Antitz of Baltimore, 1-0.

At Turner's Arena Blackwood Favored Over Wright in Fight Tonight

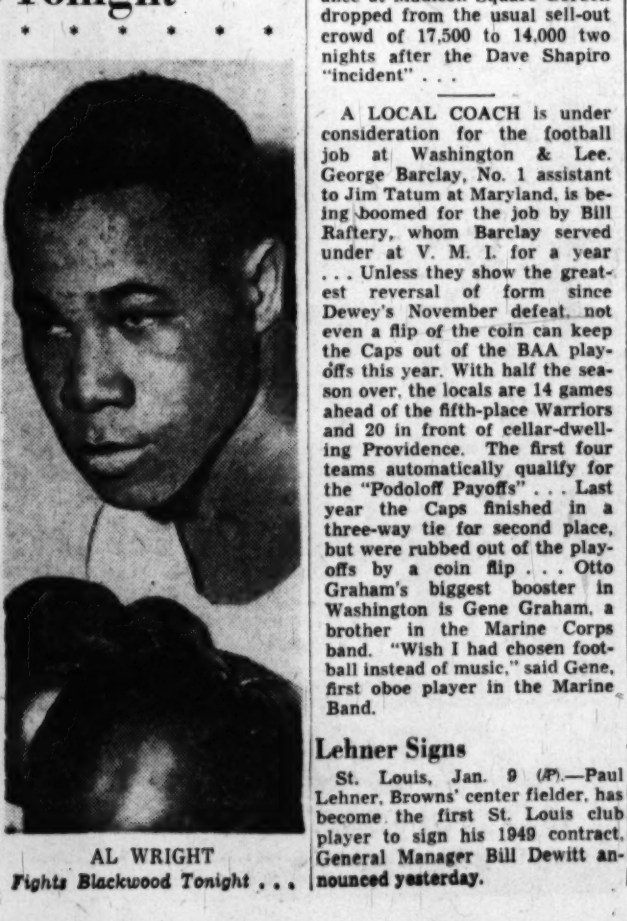

Joe Blackwood, Boston middleweight with an unblemished Washington record, is a slight favorite to keep it clean at Turner's Arena tonight where he hooks up with Al Wright, local 160-pounder. The hard-litting Blackwood easily took the measure of Ken Stribling in his only local appearance last month.

He was immediately signed to meet Wright, rated the best of the local middleweights, but injured his foot in training and the bout was sidetracked until tonight. In view of the contrasting style of the two participants, the bout shapes up as a lively affair, probably ending in a knockout. Wright is a good puncher and fair boxer. Blackwood doesn't go for the finer style of fighting, preferring to bore in and trade hits.

Blackwood campaigned in New England for several years before shifting his headquarters to Washington. His victims include Al Priest, Coley Welch, Henry Jordan and Al Costa.

Wright, until a year ago a preliminary boy, moved forward last summer with an upset victory over Smuggly Hurd.

Five-rounders show Kid Wolfe against New York's Sidney Miller; Lou Yonkers against Jerry Gorrle; in four Ernie Pope will box Jesse James; Little Dynamite will meet Cy Remond and Bobby Page will take on Emmett Harris in the first bout at 8:45.

Rochester Thumps Chicago Stags, 90-75

Chicago, Jan. 9 (AP)—The Rochester (N. Y.) Royals reversed last night's defeat today when they easily outscored the Chicago Stags to win 90 to 75 in a Basketball Association of America game before 6561 fans in Chicago Stadium.

The victory put the Royals in a temporary tie for second place in the Western division with Minneapolis, which plays tonight. Bob Davies, Rochester forward, took scoring honors with 26 points. Max Zaslofsky, Stag forward, topped the scoring for the losers with 22 points.

With the score tied at 20-20, Rochester went ahead in the last minute of the first quarter on Bob Wozner's field goal and remained ahead for the rest of the game. Both teams scored 28 field goals, but Rochester's winning margin came at the free throw line.

Caps Launch 3-Game Week Against Celtics

The Washington Caps play three times this week beginning tonight by traveling to Boston for a clash with the much-bedecked Celtics. The Celtics have been unpredictable, but any lineup which includes performers like Gene Stump, Charlie Halbert and Mel Riecke packs potential trouble for the Caps, who move into the second place in the Eastern Division.

Mikan Gets 29 In Laker Win

Minneapolis, Jan. 9 (AP)—Minneapolis maintained its second-place position in the Western Division of the Basketball Association of America tonight by defeating St. Louis, 74 to 58, before 5644.

George Mikan, with 29 points, led the Lakers to their twentieth victory in 30 games as St. Louis used up two centers in an effort to stop him.

Thirteenth Precinct, consisting of Sgt. P. L. Abel and Pts. S. J. Greco and C. T. Culley.

At 12:30 a. m., in a house on the 2100 block of 8th st. nw., they arrested Percy Carrington, 58, of 2212 8th st. nw., and charged him with possession of alcoholic beverages for sale and unlicensed sale of whisky. Members of the squad said their visit was preceded by an undercover man who bought a drink from Carrington.

Half an hour later the precinct squad went to 2023 8th st. nw., where two persons were arrested on charges of illegal possession and unlicensed sale of liquor. They were identified as Bertha Jackson, 46, of the 8th st. address, and Alex Johnson, 29, 2121 9th st. nw., both of whom were released under $500 bond.

Police also reported the arrest yesterday of Otis Clifton, 48, 4019 Webster st., Brentwood, Md., on charges of illegally transporting whisky and wine in violation of ABC regulations.

Otis was arrested around 5 a. m. by Corp. D. P. Rowell of the Ninth Precinct, who said he was patrolling his beat when he noticed Clifton carrying a quantity of whisky and wine from his parked automobile into a tavern on the 1300 block of H st. ne.

Chicago, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—A new Western blizzard mercifully fizzled out in the Dakotas today, but a real winter cold wave spread over the Nation.

The storm, following on the heels of last week's savage blizzard, dwindled to minor snow flurries and more moderate winds.

But a bitter cold air mass from Canada sent temperatures plunging below zero across the northern States from Montana to Minnesota and spread East, South and West.

Weather forecasters warned that southern California was in for more of the freezing weather that damaged the citrus fruit crop heavily last week. Colder temperatures also invaded northern California and a strong northeast wind threatened crops.

The cold wave, spreading south through the Plains States, swept westward into the Midwest and headed for Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and western Pennsylvania.

By Monday, the Weather Bureau said, the cold will have reached the Atlantic States, bringing snow flurries to upper New York and other areas. Temperatures will drop to the middle twenties Monday night, in the Middle Atlantic States, the bureau said.

The new storm dumped more snow on Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and other area, hard hit in last week's blizzard, before moving into the Dakotas last night. There it all but vanished.

The storm raged hardest in the Rapid City, S. Dak., area last night, where the Red Cross set up disaster operations and sent out planes to provide fuel, food and clothing to hard-pressed communities.

The cold sent the mercury down to 22 below zero at Butte, Mont., and to below zero at many points in Wyoming and Colorado.

12 Hurt When Police Charge Into Rioters

Modena, Italy, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—Twelve persons were hurt slightly today when a riot squad armed with night sticks and tear gas bombs charged into an illegal anti-government demonstration by 3000 industrial workers.

Seven of the injured were demonstrators, five were police.

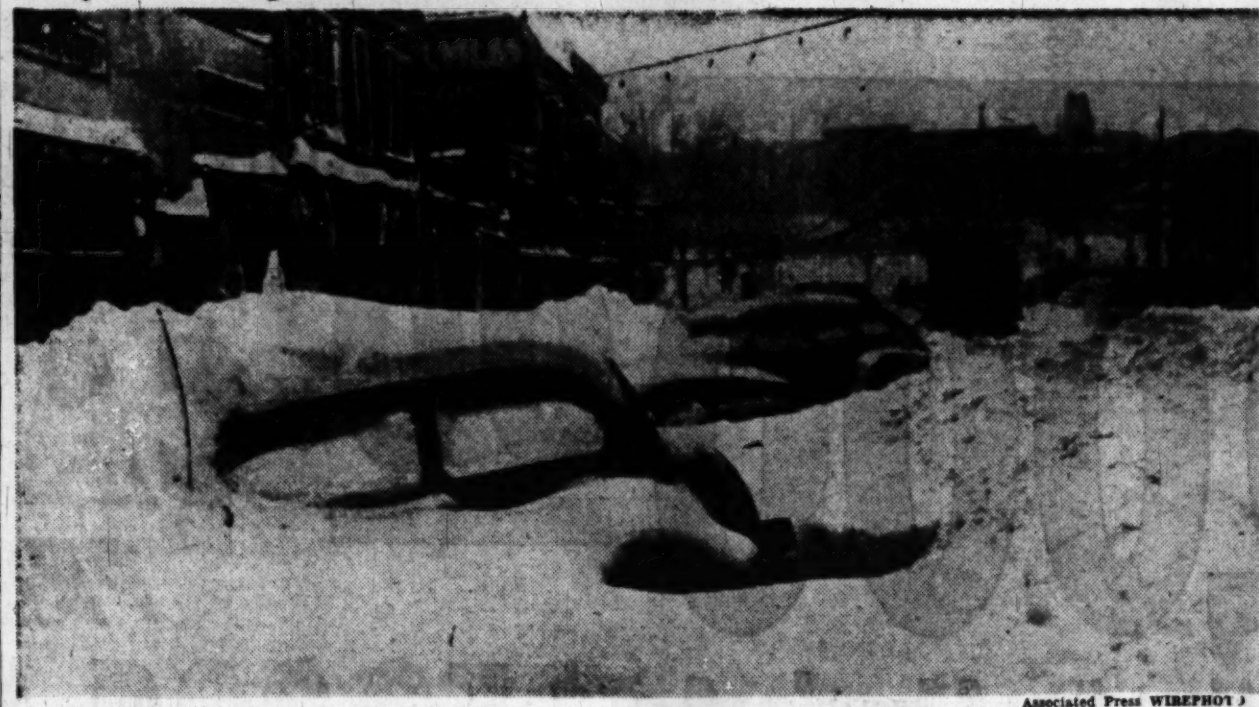

Police broke up the demonstration when the workers, after a rally protesting the closing down of a plant, tried to march through downtown Modena.

Italian Reds Ordered To Read Party Papers

Rome, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—Italy's Communist Party decreed today that each of the 2,200,000 party members must read at least one Communist publication daily.

Unofficial sources said the reason was a reported drop in circulation of Unita and other leftist newspapers.

WHITE WAY—Last week's three-day blizzard still hangs on at Pierre, the capital of South Dakota, making a white way of its main street. Mercifully, a new blizzard, forecast for yesterday, dwindled to minor snow flurries. But temperatures plunged far below zero, making snow removal difficult despite efforts of emergency crews

Nevius Tract Hearing Set Today in N. C.

The Federal Government today will argue against a $1,600,000 value set on the Nevius Tract in Arlington, in a hearing before the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals in Charlotte, N. C.

The 23-acre Nevius site was acquired by the Government from private owners by condemnation for use as a 750-bed veterans' hospital. Last February, an Alexandria District Court condemnation jury set the price of the land, and the Government appealed the decision.

Located near Arlington National Cemetery, the land has been the center of bitter three-cornered controversy, involving the county, Congress and the Government, since the hospital first was proposed there.

Congress, in response to Arlington protests, first blocked the funds to build the hospital after the property was condemned.

But when the Government refused to return the condemned property to its original owners, Arlington County agreed to the hospital proposal, and Congress approved an appropriation to build the structure.

Regulation W Held Threat to Auto Production

Detroit, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—Kaiser-Frazier Corp. disclosed today it is considering a production cutback because of credit restrictions imposed by Regulation W.

The regulation, by the Federal Reserve Board, reduces the time allowed for completing payment on the purchase of automobiles generally to about 15 months compared with a previous time allowance of 24 months or more.

Currently, Kaiser-Frazier is producing 675 cars a day. It disclosed today that it may reduce this total to 400 a day. Edgar F. Kaiser, vice president and general manager of the corporation, said if this is done from 3500 to 4000 workers may be laid off at the big Willow Run plant.

AMERICAN FAMILY CLOSE-UP
As they go, so goes the nation!

TO GET THE CHILDREN TO COLLEGE—

The Hintons Tackle Anything!

The self-starting Hintons of East Peoria, Ill., don't "do without" if they can do it themselves! Although Don was married with only a few dollars in his pocket, he and Pauline set their hearts on seeing the kids through college... on making sure they had the things they'd missed when they were young! When the children were old enough, they were asked: "How's it we all team up?" Could the whole family have fun working things out together? Would they let lack of ready money stop them...?

Building houses to save money for college, making a trailer for fun... there's nothing this family won't turn their hand to! The "construction crew": amateur architect-builder Don Hinton and his sons Jack, 15; Jerry, 11.

Don's pay as night shift foreman in a machinery plant covers their ordinary needs. But even wisely managed, it just isn't enough for the "important extras." That's where family teamwork comes in!

Everybody shares in building houses—Pauline paints; Jean, 13, helps. They've sold one house; live in another; are starting No. 3.

Jack's part-time grocery job and early-morning paper route add $18 a week to college fund. His share from house sale: $200.

But life isn't all work! Bargain second-hand boat and outdoor tackle them fishing, camping. "We fix things up, make 'em do," says Don. "That way, a little money provides a lot of fun!"

At family conferences, all the Hintons have a voice in money matters... learn how they're doing. Life insurance is part of their money-managing. The Hintons started buying it early, already have $20,919 of life insurance protection. They budget $49.95 a month for it. From Don's regular pay of less than $400 a month, $30 also goes for the house, $100 for food, $20 for the car. Pauline says, "We certainly haven't had much to spend. We've all worked to make ends meet. But the children really feel they have a great deal."

Homemade music is fun, too! Jack plays trumpet, drums, piano. He's organizing a band for school dances—another money-making idea. Music will be his college major.

Young Jerry hopes to be an automotive engineer. His parents will help him make it, if they can!

Worsham Shoots His 3d 75 in Row

Los Angeles, Jan. 9.—Law Worsham of Washington, D. C., shot his third straight 75 today to bring his total up to 225. Otto Greiner of Baltimore faltered with a 79 to give him a third-round total of 226.

Ben Hogan, failing to capitalize on climatic conditions which sent scores zooming, went from bad to worse.

Hogan, three-time winner and defending champion, took a 76 for 222.

Gibson's round was a fine exhibition against the elements.

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND THEIR AGENTS

BRING YOU THIS STORY BECAUSE... families like the Hintons show us one way that happiness is earned! You, yourself, probably know a family, right in your own town, that is getting ahead in the same typically American way. Such families prove to all of us that we can solve our own problems by our own efforts... Their example shows too why it is so important for us to hold to our rights to think for ourselves, to work at what we like, to live as we choose. For what this country amounts to depends upon what happens to its homes!

THE OFFICIAL RULES—Please Read Carefully

1. $100,000 will be awarded in accordance with the instructions, official prize list and these rules to the contestants who achieve the highest scores in solving the Official Puzzle. The sum will be awarded in three prize groups: Group No. 1 with a first prize of $5,000.00; Group No. 2 with a first prize of $15,000.00; Group No. 3 with a first prize of $30,000.00. Each group has an additional list of 100 prizes each, making a total of 330 prizes in all. (See official list of prizes.)

2. To enter Group 1 a contestant must send in with his answer to the puzzle a donation of $2.00 to the Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation; to enter Group 2 a donation of $5.00 is required and to enter Group 3 a donation of $10.00 must be sent in. A contestant may compete in any one, two or all three prize groups and once having entered may transfer his entry from any group or groups to any other group or groups by submitting the necessary additional donation any time prior to final judging.

3. Each prize group will be judged separately. The contestant who submits the highest valid score in Group 1 will be entitled to first prize in Group 1. Second prize in Group 1 will be awarded to the contestant with the second highest score submitted in that list and so on until the 110 prizes in Group 1 have been awarded. Prizes in Groups 2 and 3 will be awarded similarly.

4. In the event of tie in any group (which seems likely, since this is a large national contest), many prizes will be reserved in that group as are tied contestants, before any prizes are awarded for lower scores. To break such ties these tied contestants will be required to send in solutions to a set of five tie-breaking puzzles. The solutions to puzzle No. 1 in this tie-breaking set will be judged first and then the tie-for prizes will be awarded in the order of the valid scores submitted. If this is not sufficient to break all ties and permit awarding of all the tie-for prizes, then the solutions to puzzle No. 2 submitted by the remaining tied contestants will be judged. If ties still remain, the solutions of the still tied contestants to puzzle No. 3 will then be judged and so on, if necessary, to puzzle No. 5. This may mean that puzzles Nos. 2 to 5 may not have to be judged. (It is understood that in the last DAV Service Foundation Contest top prize of $33,000 was awarded as the result of judging only puzzle No. 1 in the first tie-breaking set.) However, if further needed to break ties a second, third or even a fourth set (each of 5 such tie-breaking puzzles to be judged similarly) may be used. All tie-breaking puzzles will be similar to the original puzzle with clearly identifiable objects, though the objects may be more difficult and more numerous. Partial credit may be given for partial solutions. Tie-breaking puzzles will be judged on the same basis as the original puzzle. The time limit for solving and mailing back the first set of tie-breaking puzzles (if needed) will be ten days from the date of mailing to tied contestants, and therefore all tie-breaking puzzles will be mailed on the same day in a local area near tied contestants; if (if needed) not less than 3 days each. Tied contestants will not be required to make any additional contributions. Should entry ties remain after the fourth set of tie-breaking puzzles, each tied contestant will receive the full amount of the prize for which he or she is still tied.

5. The contest is open to any resident of the Continental United States except employees of the DAV and its subsidiary units, the DAV Service Foundation, its advertising agency, its service organization, or members of their families. Also excluded is anyone who has won $500.00 or more in cash or kind awarded in any other contest prior to entering this contest, or any member of his or her family. Every possible precaution will be taken to enforce this provision. Only one member of an immediate family living at the same address may compete. All entries must bear a permanent home address in the Continental United States to which all contest mail will be sent. Where a contestant changes such permanent home address, the DAV Service Foundation should be notified immediately, but the Foundation can, in no case, assume responsibility for delivery of mail. In view of the uncertain address of members of the Armed Forces on active duty, and the consequent delay in mail delivery, this contest of necessity is not open to them.

6. Each contestant will receive an acknowledgment and an entry number upon receipt of his or her solution to the Official Puzzle, which solution must be submitted on an Official Entry Form and must be accompanied by a contribution of $2.00 or more. At no extra cost, one substitute solution can be submitted on the Official Substitute Solution Form which will be sent to each contestant and which will carry the entry number registered by the contestant's name. In working out and submitting puzzle solutions, contestants must follow the instructions accompanying the puzzle. Names does not count, but unsigned or illegible entries, or entries so unsigned as to be confusing, will not be considered, and donations accompanying such entries will be returned upon request after judging is completed. Where more than one entry is submitted by an individual, his or her highest valid score will be considered only in that group or groups in which that score is entered. The time limit for solving and mailing back the first set of tie-breaking puzzles (if needed) will be ten days from the date of mailing to tied contestants, and therefore all tie-breaking puzzles will be mailed on the same day in a local area near tied contestants; if (if needed) not less than 3 days each. Tied contestants will not be required to make any additional contributions. Should entry ties remain after the fourth set of tie-breaking puzzles, each tied contestant will receive the full amount of the prize for which he or she is still tied.

7. In solving the puzzle, practically any word that may be used. A contestant will not receive more points than that claimed nor more than that earned. Therefore, please use care in totaling your score. Remember not to use any hypothetical word or form. No plural or other inflectional form is acceptable unless it appears in bold-face type. No word that appears only as part of a two or more word phrase or expression (such as "suey" in "chop suey") is admissible.

8. The DAV Service Foundation will not enter into any individual correspondence concerning the eligibility of any word for use in solving the puzzle. Each contestant however may be required, upon request, to furnish the source of any word used.

9. All entries must be sent by mail to:
DAV SERVICE FOUNDATION
$100,000.00 Puzzle Contest
Washington 6, D. C.
and received before 5:00 P. M., May 15, 1949, to be eligible for consideration. The deadline date for mailing and receipt of substitute solutions are 60 days after these respective dates. The failure of any contestant, after receipt by the DAV Service Foundation, properly to identify the source of a questioned word, may make said word inadmissible. The DAV Service Foundation will not be responsible for lost or delayed communications or for clerical or mechanical errors and each contestant, by the act of sending in an entry agrees to be bound by the rules and instructions and, in any event, with the decision of the DAV Service Foundation and/or its Committee on Awards on any and all matters affecting the contest.

10. Any contestant who accepts help of any kind from anyone (same family or household excepted) will be disqualified. Sworn statements to this effect will be required of all winners and every reasonable effort will be made to enforce this rule.

Help Us To Help America's Disabled Veterans

The Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation invites YOU to enter its new 1949 Annual Puzzle Contest. It invites your support and offers you the opportunity to win a share of $100,000.00 in Cash Prizes.

At the same time, the Trustees of the DAV Service Foundation thank all those who participated in our last puzzle contest, enabling the Foundation to allocate a very substantial sum to the DAV, for use in maintaining its nation-wide service set up, to advise and assist thousands of deserving handicapped veterans (and their dependents and widows and orphans) to become physically and vocationally adjusted to useful self-sustaining civilian living.

Incorporated by special Act of Congress, the DAV needs these funds—and much more—to help rehabilitate America's 2,500,000 disabled war veterans—to help them to obtain needed claim evidence, service connections, medical care, hospitalization, vocational training, and suitable employment. ... yes, even to solve personal problems.

It is for these services that the Foundation again solicits your support. Yes, your contribution is needed, and you will be happy to know that every penny of the net proceeds of this contest (after paying for the prizes, advertising and all other necessary expenses) will be used by the Foundation and by the DAV to continue its work.

Act on this golden opportunity now! Read the Entry Form and read the rules. Then try your hand at solving the Official Puzzle printed here. Note that you may send in a higher score free of charge later on if you find you can improve on the solution you now send in. So there's really no reason to delay. The important thing is to get into the contest right away and put in your bid for your share of the prizes. (See special prize for fast action featured at the left.)

Remember, in helping America's disabled veterans you may be helping yourself to a fortune of $50,000.00 cash or some other part of $100,000.00 which must be won!

JUST FOLLOW THESE SIMPLE INSTRUCTIONS

1. Identify the six objects at the top of the puzzle. (The name of each object is a six-letter word.)
2. See the table of letter values below the puzzle. Each letter is worth a certain number of points. If you have exactly named the objects you will find that the total value of the 36 letters that spell out the names of the six objects is 743 points. If you don't arrive at 743 points then try again, for the 36 letters must add up to 743 points.
3. Now your job is to place those words, correctly spelled, into the shaded letterpaths, each of which has space for six letters. You can place any one of the six words in any one of the shaded paths. Each word must read from top to bottom or left to right.
4. You will now note there are 13 empty white squares remaining in the diagram. Now you must insert letters of your own choosing into those 13 white squares and by combining these letters with the interlocking letters you have already filled into the grey squares, spell out 5 extra complete words. Each of these 5 extra words, too, must read from top to bottom or from left to right.
5. Of course, it is easy to fill in 13 extra letters which in combination with the letters in the grey squares will spell out 5 extra different words, but remember your job is to use 13 letters that will give you a high score when the value of those extra letters (as shown in the table of letter values) is added to the 743 points you will have already earned if you identified the pictured objects correctly.

Frances Perkins Expected to Stay in Civil Service

FRANCES PERKINS—did she turn down "a bigger job" in the Truman Administration? The Wall Street Journal reports she did. Miss Perkins had a conference with the President a week ago. It's a good bet that she will remain on the Civil Service Commission for an indefinite period.

WILLIAM A. JUMP: This outstanding career man is critically ill. He was stricken only a few days after he was retired on disability after a long and distinguished record in the Agriculture Department.

M. JOSEPH MEEHAN is the new director of Commerce's Office of Business Economics. He succeeds Amos E. Taylor, who resigned to take an important assignment with the Pan American Union.

JOSEPH GARTLAND, one of Uncle Sam's top budget officers, will retire soon from the Post Office Department. He has had more than 50 years of Federal service.

DANIEL G. MONROE, a reviewer in General Accounting's audit division, is retiring after 45 years of faithful service.

LEO E. GEORGE is the new chairman of the AFL's Government Employees Council. He's president of the respected National Federation of Postal Clerks.

WILLIAM C. DOHERTY of AFL's letter carriers, is vice chairman, and ORRIN A. BURROW, of the electrical work, is secretary treasurer. The council is thumping for a flat $650 pay raise for Federal employees.

EMPLOYE groups are going to bat in an effort to save the jobs of professional staff members of the Senate Civil Service Committee. With the Democrats in the saddle, the ax is swinging over the heads of George Riley, staff director; John Phenix, retirement expert; and Colette Homan, clerk.

CHALMERS JOHNSON plans to give the Republicans two of the 10 committee jobs. The staff problem will be settled at the first committee meeting this week.

NOMINEES: These are new nominees for the Junior Board award for the outstanding Federal worker under 35:

H. RICHARD McCAMANT of the Civil Service Commission; OLYMPIA D. MCCOOL, Army Department; MARK LEVA, Secretary of Defense; DELBERT M. STEINER, Interstate Commerce; STANLEY W. OZARK, Postoffice Department; WILLIAM S. LOCHRIE, Air Forces; DR. HAROLD LYONS, Commerce Department; LYLE A. DUNSTAN, Federal Power Commission; KARL A. FOX, Agriculture Department; and HERMAN BRETTMAN, Rural Electrification Administration.

VETERANS: 900,000 of them are now in Federal jobs, an all-time record number. This is an increase of 90,000 in the past year. In and nearby the Capital are 72,000 veterans in Government.

About 95 per cent of the total are men. Some 732,000 are entitled to 5 preference points, and 130,000 were given 10 points. Of the latest number, 113,000 are disabled veterans, and 17,000 are wives, widows or orphans of veterans.

TOP GRADES: The number of Federal workers in the three top professional grades, P-6, P-7 and P-8, continues to grow, while employees in the corresponding CAF levels, 13, 14 and 15, is declining steadily. This is the tally:

In the high-ranking professional grades are 974 employees, an increase of 1400 since 1946. This reflects the increased emphasis on scientific research and development. In contrast, the number of workers in the top CAF grades slumped from 8,330 in 1946 to 7425.

JOBS: To fill an estimated 1500 nursing jobs, Civil Service soon will announce exams for staff nurse and head nurse. Salaries range from $2974 to $3727. Also on deck is an exam to be announced for physical science and biological aid. About 300 of these jobs are open. They pay from $2152 to $3727 to start.

The Veterans Administration Hospital here, 2650 Wisconsin ave., has exams open for housekeeper, $2020 to $2350; chauffeur, $2152 to $2380, and laborer, $2020 to $2152.

New Gaming Disclosures Promised in Keleher Case

Attorney for Wife
Wires Gov. Lane
Of Prince Georges
Exposure Today

James J. Laughlin, Washington attorney, yesterday promised a courtroom exposure today of Prince Georges gambling conditions, and wired Maryland's Governor Lane suggesting he designate a representative to sit in on the revelation.

Laughlin represents Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, who is seeking a limited divorce from once-convicted gambler John B. Keleher on cruelty grounds. Keleher also is asking a limited divorce on similar charges.

In his telegram to Lane, Laughlin said:

"I suggest that you designate one of your representatives to sit in the courtroom of Hon. Edward A. Tamm, United States District Court for the District of Columbia beginning 10 a. m. Monday in the case of Keleher vs. Keleher, since testimony will develop extensive gambling operations in Prince Georges County, and the mutinous defiance of duly constituted authority by those in charge of the gambling house and the negligent failure of the county police to do anything about it."

Last week Mrs. Keleher testified her husband is running a betting establishment just over the District Line at 3205 Rhode Island ave. ne., Mount Rainier. When informed of her testimony, Chief Ralph W. Brown, of Prince Georges County Police, said he would like more information from Mrs. Keleher so a warrant could be obtained.

Otherwise, he said, the police will take "necessary" action of their own. Brown declared he was certain there were no "big establishments" in Mount Rainier, but admitted the possibility there might be a place where bets could be made by telephone.

Governor Lane could not be reached for comment on Laughlin's wire last night. Chief Brown was reported "out of town for the weekend."

Postlude

Four Pianos About Three Too Many

By Richard Keith

The First Piano Quartet (and let us hope it is also the last) played a concert to a capacity audience yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall.

It is impossible to review the program from a serious point of view, but at least it can be said that most of the people who came, including President Truman and his daughter, Margaret, seemed to enjoy the whole thing greatly and stayed on for encores.

Since original compositions for four pianos are practically nonexistent, the program was made up of transcriptions of piano solos, songs, orchestral pieces and so forth.

The least successful were the arrangements of piano solos which, in their natural state, are perfectly played by one pianist at one piano.

The circumstance left three of the pianists yesterday with dangerously little to do, and, as it seems to be a general rule of the group that all four must play constantly, they spent their time adding meaningless sludges, trillings, ripples and thumpings. What happened to the Schubert B Flat Impromptu and the Chopin E Major Etude shouldn't happen to "Hearts and Flowers."

The arrangements of orchestral pieces were more acceptable, but even so, the absence of orchestral tone colors could not be compensated for. The most successful attempt was a movement from the Bach Concerto for three harpsichords and orchestra. Here very little arranging was required.

The whole trouble is that no amount of individual skill can overcome the fact that four grand pianos playing at once are just too many pianos.

Hokanson Gives Recital

Randolph Hokanson, pianist, gave a recital last night at the National Gallery.

The composers represented were traditional, but the music was a little more varied than the usual fare. Featured were the Bach D Major Toccata, the Mozart Sonata in A minor and the Mendelssohn Variations Serieuses.

Mr. Hokanson is an extremely neat player. He made very few slips and always paid meticulous attention to obtaining a beautiful and singing melodic line, but some passages didn't come out clearly, and the left-hand part often overbalanced the right. His playing could well be called sensibly romantic.

Baby Bruised, Parents Have Sitter Arrested

POINT TO MARKS—Mrs. Morton and her wife, Mrs. Teresa Morton, of 4136 Arkansas ave. nw., show bruises on their baby girl, Kathleen, 6½ months old. Miss Harriet Fitzgerald, 60, of 1825 F st. nw., was arrested on an assault warrant sworn out by Sergeant Morton. Mrs. Morton said she hired Miss Fitzgerald from an agency to sit with the baby. The mother said she found bruises on the baby later. Miss Fitzgerald denied any wrong doing

Sitter Arrested As Parents Claim Baby Was Beaten

58-Year-Old Woman
Defendant States
She Only Gave Her
Few 'Soothing Taps'

The parents of a 6½-month-old baby girl charged yesterday that the baby was beaten black and blue by a 58-year-old registered woman baby sitter, with whom the baby was left for about three hours on Friday.

Mrs. Teresa Morton, of 4136 Arkansas ave. nw., said it was the first time she had left Kathleen, her only child, with anyone and she did it without her husband's knowledge.

The baby sitter, Miss Harriet Fitzgerald, of 1825 F st. nw., was arrested Saturday night on a warrant charging assault sworn out by the baby's father, Marine Master Sgt. Donald J. Morton. At the Women's Bureau last night, she refused to comment on the incident.

Dr. Carolyn Pincock, 4000 16th st. nw., Mrs. Morton's pediatrician, said yesterday that when she saw Kathleen on Friday, the baby had "at least 12 multiple bruises, deep in color, and definitely must have had some severe blows." She gave the baby sedatives and prescribed heat treatment, the doctor added.

Mrs. Morton told The Washington Post she had called a mothers' registry because she had a downtown appointment Friday morning.

Miss Fitzgerald had arrived from the agency at about 8:45 a. m., and she had left her apartment about 9, the mother said. When she returned at about 11:45 a. m., Miss Fitzgerald was standing behind a chair, holding the baby, who was sobbing, according to Mrs. Morton. The baby, Mrs. Morton said, was bruised on the small of her back.

The mother continued: "I said I guessed she had a hard time with the baby, but she replied, 'Oh, no, she's a little dear.' I put the baby in her carriage, and asked Miss Fitzgerald if she would have something to eat, but she said she couldn't."

"Then she said, 'I want to tell you something. You have a very noisy neighbor, and I want to tell you what she did, before she does.' She knocked on the door and accused me of beating your baby. The baby was crying, and I have discovered that it soothes a baby to pat it. That's what I was doing—not beating her."

"Miss Fitzgerald told me she just loved children and wouldn't do that to any baby," continued Mrs. Morton.

After Miss Fitzgerald had left, Mrs. Morton called her landlady, Mrs. James M. Rogers, who lives in the upstairs apartment of the three-story brick house occupied on the ground floor by the Mortons.

Mrs. Rogers told her she had heard the baby crying at about 11:30 a. m., and thought she heard sounds of slapping, so she investigated. "I stood outside the door for five minutes, because I didn't want to accuse anyone of slapping your baby without being sure," Mrs. Morton quoted Mrs. Rogers as saying. "When I was sure she was beating her, I knocked and she came to the door with the baby in her arms."

The landlady accused Miss Fitzgerald of beating the baby. Mrs. Morton said she told her, and then warned her that if she heard any more sounds of beating she would come down and take the baby upstairs with her. She then wrapped the baby in some blankets and put her in the carriage, she said.

When she started to bathe the baby a short time later, Mrs. Morton saw the black and blue marks, which included "four perfect finger imprints," according to Sergeant Morton, who rushed down from Marine Corps Headquarters at the Arlington Annex when his wife phoned him.

Police said Earl Tutt, alias Tucker, of 1100 W st. nw., was found lying on the floor of his cell, gasping for breath and apparently unconscious, by Pvt. Robert N. Hough. Tutt died while being taken to Freedmen's Hospital.

Tutt was arrested at 4:15 a. m. yesterday in the 1400 block of U st. nw. District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said he will hold post-mortem today at noon at the District Morgue.

Hurtled 23 Feet

Baby Thrown Into Snow; Girl Is Held

A girl who Arlington police say threw her new-born baby out of a second-story window after an unassisted birth yesterday was charged with attempted murder by county authorities.

Police listed the mother as Miss Janet Clemmons, 20, a former drug-store counter girl who gave her address as 605 Park ave., in Falls Church. She was held in Arlington County Jail last night, with her bond set at $2500.

According to police, the baby girl was born December 19 at a rooming house at 3336 Wilson blvd., Arlington, where the mother then lived.

Police said that shortly after the unassisted birth, the mother threw the child 23 feet from the building's second-story window into the snow which then covered the ground.

A rooming house resident who saw the baby lying in the snow called the Arlington Rescue Squad. The tiny girl was rushed to Arlington Hospital, where her condition last night was listed as "poor" due to exposure.

Police said they had learned of the case only Saturday night. The delay was due to the fact that Arlington Hospital, through an oversight, had not reported the case, according to police.

Woman Held In Liquor Store Theft Case

A woman who police say took four bottles of whisky from a shattered liquor store window because she "thought it was free" was arrested yesterday and charged with housebreaking.

She is Mrs. Ruth E. Jackson, 38, of 21 O st. sw., arrested after Fourth Precinct Pts. R. J. Maghan and Earl M. Walter finished investigating the smashed window at the Franklin Liquor Store, 608 4th st. sw.

Cruising around the corner in their scout car, they said they saw Mrs. Jackson, her arms loaded with four bottles. She denied breaking the store window, they said, but admitted taking the whisky.

Liquor store owner Louis Franklin, 3510 Livingston st. nw., told police a total of 38 bottles of liquor were stolen from the window, including a fifth of Louis XIII French cognac valued at $25.

Another liquor store larceny was reported by Philip Shapiro, manager of a liquor store at 208 Massachusetts ave. ne. He told police that thieves who entered the store by smashing a rear window got away with 65 bottles of whisky valued at $285.

Police said an undetermined quantity of narcotics, 10 cartons of cigarettes and $20 in cash was stolen from the Chillum Heights Pharmacy, 12 Kennedy st. nw., early yesterday by thieves who broke in a rear door.

Manager Phillip Korn of the Burleigh Market, 1332 35th st. nw., told police his store was entered over the weekend by forcing the bars on a rear window. He said 35 cartons of cigarettes and $55 in cash were missing.

Prisoner Dies Soon After Arrest

A 32-year-old prisoner at Thirteenth Precinct station, died yesterday 12 hours after he was arrested on a drunk charge.

Police said Earl Tutt, alias Tucker, of 1100 W st. nw., was found lying on the floor of his cell, gasping for breath and apparently unconscious, by Pvt. Robert N. Hough. Tutt died while being taken to Freedmen's Hospital.

Tutt was arrested at 4:15 a. m. yesterday in the 1400 block of U st. nw. District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said he will hold post-mortem today at noon at the District Morgue.

Woman Found Man Killed, Companions Hurt, Slain in Home, As Car Upsets at Savage, Md. Spouse Held

Laborer, 32, Admits
Earlier Quarrel,
Police Report

Police last night were holding a 32-year-old laborer in connection with the death of his wife who was found with her throat cut in the couple's apartment, 1806 New Jersey ave. nw., early yesterday.

The man, Monroe Johnson, was arrested late yesterday afternoon in an apartment building in the 1700 block Columbia rd. nw. after a city-wide police lookout had been flashed for him.

His wife, Elizabeth, age 32, had been found dead by police at 5:30 a. m. when they entered the apartment in response to a complaint about fighting from other residents of the building.

Police said Johnson admitted that he and his wife quarreled, then fought, over money. He said the fatal wound was inflicted with a pocket knife, according to police, although the weapon has not yet been recovered. Johnson will appear at a coroner's inquest at 11:30 a. m. today.

Meanwhile, Montgomery County police yesterday lodged a murder charge against a Naval Hospital employee in the fatal shooting of his younger brother at their home in Bowie, Md., Saturday night.

The accused is Ernest McKinley Turner, 26, who, police said, admitted shooting his brother, Harold, 22, through the chest with a shotgun following an altercation which started with an argument over liquor. The shooting was witnessed by the two men's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Turner, who live with them at the Maryland home.

Police quoted Ernest Turner as saying he shot in self-defense when his brother threatened him. He is being held without bond for a hearing in Rockville Trial Magistrate Court.

A Laurel man was killed in an early morning traffic accident yesterday near Savage, Md.

The dead man was identified by Maryland State Police as Thomas McKenna, 24, of Laurel, Md., who apparently died of a broken neck when the car in which he was riding with two companions overturned on U. S. Route 1 at Guilford Curve, near Savage.

McKenna's companions, Mitchell Frye, 24, of Jessup, Md., and Raymond D. Dudley, 29, of Laurel, were admitted to University Hospital, Baltimore, for treatment of fractured collar bones and lacerations.

In the District, James O. Vestal, 27, a used car salesman, of 813 Ml. Vernon pl. nw., suffered a possible skull fracture, fractured back and lacerations when his car was in collision with another at 6th st. and New York ave. nw., at 3 a. m. His condition was described as serious at Emergency Hospital.

Police identified the driver of the other car as Staff Sgt. Melvin J. Noel, attached to Bolling Air Base, who is living temporarily at 1702 26th st. se. He was uninjured.

Another District accident caused injuries to a father and his son, 5, when their automobile was in collision with a Capital Transit Co. bus at 14th and Newton sts. ne., at 10:15 a. m.

The father, Miguel L. M. Balardino, 39, 1015 Otis st. ne., was treated for lacerations at Casualty Hospital, but his son, Miguel E. Balardino was admitted to the hospital with multiple lacerations of the face and a fractured leg.

In an unusual accident last night, a woman who was struck by an automobile was saved from possible serious injury because of the presence of her two dogs, Great Danes. She was Mrs. Elizabeth J. McSherry, 48, 3232 Garfield st. nw., wife of Brig. Gen. Frank J. McSherry (U. S. A. retired) and a national director of the Animal Rescue League.

Mrs. McSherry was walking between her two dogs, General Nicholson and Candacy, across the intersection of 32d st., Garfield st., and Cleveland ave. about 6:15 p. m. The automobile struck General Nicholson, breaking his right hind leg and knocking Mrs. McSherry down across Candacy on her other side.

Police Pvt. Percy C. Duvall of Accident Investigation Unit said Mrs. McSherry escaped possible death because General Nicholson's 165 pounds broke the impact of the automobile and Candacy broke Mrs. McSherry's fall. Mrs. McSherry was in Doctors Hospital with a broken ankle and chipped heel bone.

Driver of the automobile was listed as Virgil McComas, 54, 307 Elm st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Police Charge Soldier In Hit-Run Accident

Virginia State Police yesterday arrested a 28-year-old Fort Belvoir private and obtained his confession to being involved in a hit-run accident, they said.

The police identified him as Pvt. Sylvester P. Sims. They said he was the driver of a "greenish" car that struck a Wilmington (N. C.) truck driver, Earl Smith, near Gum Springs, Fairfax County, about 8 a. m. Saturday as he crossed No. 1 highway on foot.

Smith had stopped his truck and was crossing to a diner when he was hit. Witnesses who gave police a description of the car said the driver backed up, looked at Smith and then drove off.

Smith is in Alexandria Hospital with a fractured pelvis, broken leg and possible skull fracture. His condition is described as "critical."

Sims was apprehended when a State patrolman recognized his car from the description, about a mile from the scene of the accident and gave chase. Sims, police said, drove into a yard in Gum Springs, and started to flee on foot, but stopped when the patrolman drew his revolver.

Sims is being held on a hit-and-run charge, and driving without an operator's license. Bond was set at $1000.

The Navy Department yesterday presented the National University of Law, 1225 New York ave. nw., a "Mark of Commendation" bronze plaque for its "effective cooperation in training Supply Corps officers for World War II."

Rear Admiral E. D. Foster, USN, chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, made the presentation to Chief Judge George P. Barse of the Municipal Court, chancellor of the university, at a reception held at the school.

"The Navy is proud of the service the school rendered to the war effort," Admiral Foster told the assembly.

He said it was at this university that a wartime training program for reserve supply officers was launched.

The university graduated 88 officers for duty in the Navy Supply Corps between January 6, 1941, and May 20, 1941.

More than 100 students and alumni of the school were present with members of the board of trustees at the presentation and unveiling of the plaque.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Literally Forced Man She Loves To Stay On With Wife He Dislikes, Woman Is Worried by His Shattered Appearance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The man I love is married, and a month ago I returned him to his wife. I literally forced him to give her the second chance she wanted. I told him if it didn't work out in a year, we could feel we had acted honorably.

Believe me, I did not do this lightly. I love Joe, who is good and kind, and I love him constructively. He loves me, too, and went back to Sybil because I thought it was the right thing to do. In the interim I hadn't seen him until two nights ago, when he came to my apartment and I was shocked at the way he looked.

He didn't attempt to make love to me. He sat and talked for several hours; said I was wrong in what I had done, and asked me quietly to release him from his promise to stay with Sybil. She is trying seriously to turn over a new leaf and behave herself; but he says it has come too late.

Wife Had Various Unsavory Affairs

IN THE PAST she treated their marriage as if it meant nothing. She left him several times, had several unsavory affairs, misconducted herself while he was in the Army and overseas, made a specialty of disparaging him, etc., and he stood it all because he loved her in those years.

Then we met and were friends for several months before our love developed, whereupon he asked Sybil for a divorce, in order to marry me, and she reacted hysterically. She wept and raved, decided she loved him, threatened to kill me, carried poison in her purse, publicly proclaimed me a home-wrecker, exhorted my minister to "reason" with me, etc.

Also she subjected me to a hysterical scene, saying she hadn't known how much she loved Joe until she thought she'd lost him. But now Joe tells me the situation is driving him crazy, that his only feeling for her is contempt, tinged with pity; and that he needs me. Heaven knows I need him, and I hope to win in the long run; but I want to win fair and square, so what's the answer? K. R.

Woman's Altruist Pose Cloaks Fear

DEAR K. R.: It seems to me you are striving to act and sound bigger than you feel, in the face of Sybil's tigerish refusal to hand over Joe to you.

I think you are bluffing, even to yourself, in espousing a detached philosophic "sporting" attitude towards her screaming fight for a second chance. As I see the picture, you are afraid of Sybil, and using your influence with Joe to force him to stay with her, until her malignant fury beamed at you abates, as you hope it will.

Your long letter, here cut to the bone, seems to weigh the situation from every angle, in terms that seem amazingly dispassionate, reasonable and large minded (all things considered) on first reading. But your pressure on Joe to stay with Sybil against his will tells another story, to wit, that you are cagily (if unconsciously) exploiting him as buffer to save your neck while danger is rampant, and trying to put a fine face on your daunted maneuver.

Better Back Out of Others' Strife

IN MY OPINION, it's not compatible with honor and/or common sense for you to instruct Joe how to behave as regards Sybil. And since fundamentally you are most concerned about self-preservation at this time, my advice is to put yourself on record with both of them as washing your hands of their marital sickness and strife.

They are a frightfully neurotic pair, and Joe's purist vow that he wants no affair with you, when combined with Sybil's saga of infidelity and his excessive tolerance of it—until you encouraged him to lean on you—suggests that he may be unmanly in every sense of the word. But whatever the crux of their trouble, it's a good idea to have your minister tell Joe and Sybil that you've bowed out of their private war, and want them both to stay away from your door. M. H.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

It's Hard to Sit Still

Yes, this is a fact. It's hard for young children to sit still. We adults often find it pleasant and almost moral to have children sit quietly. In the older type of schools young children are still expected to sit in seats for hours with very little moving around. At home, when the noise and bustle gets too disturbing, we may insist that a child sit still with a book or playing. For a while it's possible. Then it actually becomes almost a kind of torture.

Have you ever been in a situation where you needed to scratch of the time. It's hard as we grow older to be as tolerant of noise as we used to be. If we can't take it, it's better to arrange for the child to play where he can be active or go ourselves to another part of the house where we won't be disturbed by normal child activity. PARDON ME...

...but there's something you really should know. It's about the most unusual place in town—Cody's Service Center. They clean and repair just about everything. If you have a suit or coat to be made over, a dress to be remodeled, they'll take care of that, too. They feature custom dry cleaning, black hats, mens' suits, renewing buttons and much more. Take your troubles to Cody's Service Center, 712 12th Street, N.W. Sterling 7058. Mail orders accepted.

and couldn't? If so, you can imagine how a child, who is made to sit quietly, feels. His muscles are calling for action. He's actually uncomfortable. He squirms and wriggles not because he is being stubborn and uncooperative, but because he can't help it.

Sometimes, of course, the situation demands that a child at least be reasonably quiet. But, wherever possible, one should avoid restricting the child's bodily movement. It's an important part of his development to be moving most

Strapless Glamour Demands Curves Be Seen in Right Places

By Ida Jean Kain

THE glamour gowns that obligingly stay up with no straps at all call for curves. The bare facts are that only the girls with a little meat on their collarbones dare wear this strapless style. Or dresses with necklines cut down to—there.

Curves at the shoulderline are de rigueur this season, so uncurl from that easy chair, my bony, bony lassie, and plan your strategy. Get a move on and change hollows at the base of the throat to dimples. Fill out the slope from the crest of the shoulder to the bust, and perk up your posture.

A well-developed chest goes with superb health and a moderate amount of activity. On the weight score, you may need to gain 5 to 15 pounds, for enough fatty tissue is essential to curves, particularly in the chest region. Muscle tone and good circulation are important too. Take a bit of exercise to banish that one-cylinder look.

The best all-time exercise for filling out the chest is the old breast stroke. Fear not, you don't have to go near the water. Here's a new version of this stroke, one that will improve the figure generally as the shoulder muscles are strengthened.

Position: Swing the door half open and stand with back flat against its edge, abdomen pulled up snugly, shoulders straight. Holding the back flat against the door edge will keep the figure in good posture throughout the exercise.

Movement: Bring the arms up in front of the body, shoulder level, palms together. Now go into the breast stroke, separating the arms in a wide expanse, then bending the elbows, and extending arms out to center again in a continuous motion, always keeping arms at shoulder level. Do this smoothly and vigorously, pushing against the resistance of imaginary waves.

Swing into this one . . . Position: Stand with arms straight out in front, shoulder level, palms down.

Movement: Keeping arms at shoulder level, rapidly cross them in front of the chest, then fling them out to the sides. Twenty counts . . . or more.

Finish with a resistance exercise that works wonders. Position: Stand with hands clasped in front of body, about beltline level.

Movement: Firmly pressing one hand against the other, slowly raise the arms—up to chest level, then on up above the head. Look up! Then slowly lower arms, continuing to press hands together. Copyright, 1948, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Fabrics to Be Better Quality, More Plentiful

A gradual swing from a sellers' to a buyers' market in the textile and garment industries has made fabrics, in general, better and more plentiful than ever, according to a preview of Fabrics for 1949 in the January issue of Good Housekeeping Magazine. The article is based upon tests made in the magazine's textile laboratory and laundry.

"Besides familiar fabrics," says the article, "there will be many new ones and revivals of old favorites long missing from the market. There have been marked improvements in hidden qualities that give better service, and in special finishes that impart new and desirable properties."

In the silk line, the article forecasts that features of the coming season will include crepes and satins for underwear, soft velvet and iridescent taffetas for draperies and shantung for dresses, with a fair supply of silk sheers for curtains and supple crepes of silk-and-rayon combinations, which were so popular before the war.

"The big news about crease-resistant finishes," it adds, "is that they are being applied successfully to a wide variety of cottons, including chambrays, twills, cords, seersuckers, denims, corduroys and ginghams." Experiments showed that rayon-marquisette curtains "will not shrink or wrinkle excessively if they are treated with one of the new washable, starchless finishes."

Try These Dairy Dishes

QUICK CHEESE MUFFINS—Stir 1 cup grated cheese into your favorite wheat muffin mix, pour into small buttered muffin pans and bake as usual. Delicious with salads or cream soups.

QUEEN'S FINGERS—Cut three slices leftover buttered toast into 2-inch strips. Spread lightly with jelly, then dip in cream, letting them soften just a little. Roll immediately in chopped shredded coconut, place on a buttered shallow pan and bake in hot oven for about 6 minutes, or until puffy and golden brown.

BAKED DAIRY FOOD DESSERT is different, delicious, and an excellent way of using up leftover bread. Spread 4 slices bread with a generous layer of fresh cottage cheese and place them in a buttered wide baking dish. Cover the cheese with a thick layer of sweetened apple sauce or stewed, dried apricots. Top with 4 slices buttered bread and sprinkle with ½ teaspoon cinnamon. Beat 2 eggs with 2 cups milk and 3 or 4 tablespoons sugar. Pour over the bread, let stand 10 minutes, then bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) until firm and delicately browned, or about 45 minutes. Serve warm.

New Members Welcomed At Congressional Club

By Marie McNair

Pink carnations in lapel buttonholes, white slips of paper with names inscribed pinned to jackets and frocks, identified new members of Congress and old timers at the reception yesterday afternoon at the Congressional Club.

It was the first club party for members of the Eighty-first Congress, and their wives, the last for the club's officers elected for the 1947-48 term, for the board of governors meeting this week to prepare a new slate.

Representative and Mrs. Clifford Davis headed the receiving line with Mrs. Wallace White next and then Representative and Mrs. William H. Saxton. Representative and Mrs. Leroy Johnson, Representative and Mrs. Albert Thomas, Representative and Mrs. Errett Scrivener, Representative and Mrs. Harry McGregor, Representative and Mrs. Mike Mansfield with Representative Aime Forand and Mrs. Forand last in the line.

Mrs. Davis wore electric blue lace, Mrs. White brown lace, and in almost identical shades of green separated only by husbands' dark suits were Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Saxton and Mrs. Johnson.

Welcoming Committee

All the members are put to work when there's a party at the club.

At the door, first to greet the guests a rotating group included Mrs. Clinton Anderson, in black with feathers on her hat; Mrs. David Kinkeloe wearing a flaring pink felt hat and black satin gown; Mrs. Frank A. Barrett, Mrs. Carroll D. Kearns, Mrs. Lindsay Warren, Mrs. Sterling Cole, whose scarlet brocade jacket suit was topped with an ivory brocade pillbox; Mrs. Hubert Ellis and Mrs. Jeff Busby.

No frock was smarter than Mrs. Max Truitt's hunter green sheer wool with gold embroidered crown motif at the neckline and worn with a soft felt hat with rolled brim of the same color.

Mrs. Truitt, daughter of Vice President-elect Alben Barkley, was one of the ladies at the tea table and others presiding in turn were Mrs. Clarence Cannon, Mrs. Daniel Reed, Mrs. David Rankin, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers with pink camellias pinned to her shoulder; Mrs. Otis Bland in steel blue satin; Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, Mrs. Roy Woodruff, Mrs. John Taber, wearing a black crepe gown with top of lace; Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. Carroll Kearns, Mrs. George Grant, Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Tom Connally, a pink jacket about her shoulders, and pink ostrich on her hat; Mrs. Paul

J. Kilday and Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, her black frock sparkling with sequins and tiny white satin hat atop her sleek hair.

Just back to town with a becoming Florida tan, Mrs. Brannan has her mother, Mrs. Earl Seltzer, and her sister, Marjorie, here from Denver for the inauguration, and was introducing them yesterday to her friends.

Romulo There

Just back from Florida, also are Florida's Senator, Claude Pepper, and Mrs. Pepper, pretty as ever, both in the center of varying groups yesterday.

There was a cluster too around Gen. Carlos Romulo, former Philippine resident commissioner, now head of the Philippine delegation to U. N., who was accompanied by Mrs. Romulo.

Justice Harold Burton, once Senator from Ohio, and Mrs. Burton were among those renewing friendships with the Romulos, who were so long residents here.

A pink carnation was worn by Representative Homer Thornberry new in Congress from Texas; by Charles Nelson from Maine and Representative and Mrs. Edgar Jonas, Republicans from Illinois.

Former Speaker Joe Martin needed no slip of paper to introduce himself nor did Senator and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church, Representative and Mrs. Frank Boykin all long prominent in the Congressional set.

From the feminine block in Congress I saw only Representative Chase G. Woodhouse from Connecticut, Representative Frances Bolton from Ohio.

Others there were Senator and Mrs. John J. Williams; Mrs. Joseph Farrington in pale-blue brocade satin; her daughter, Beverly, black and trimmed with chrysanthemum and silver gray ribbons caught my eye; Leslie Biffle, back again in his job as Secretary of the Senate, with Mrs. Biffle wearing a bottle green costume; Senator Kenneth Wherry, and Mrs. Wherry in black with ermine collar and cuffs; Senator and Mrs. Charles W. Tobey, and Mrs. Lowell Stockman with towering black ostrich on her tiny red hat.

Representative and Mrs. E. C. Gathings brought as their guest, Miss Frances Kimbark, a student at Martha Washington College. With Mrs. Martin Vogel was her houseguest, the celebrated pianist, Ania Dorfman.

Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock was there and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. Burks Summers with Mrs. Harry Cain, wife of Washington's Senator; Representative and Mrs. John R. Murdock, Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, sole Cabinet representative, I believe; Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Thatcher and Mrs. Ellen Woodward.

The Syrian Minister and Mme. El-Khoury were guests of Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden, and still others were Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox, Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young—Mrs. Young just out after a bout with the flu; Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Mrs. Nathaniel Dial, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Parker West, Miss Reathel Odum, Mrs. James Souby and Mrs. John L. McMillan.

NEW MEMBERS of Congress were welcomed to the Congressional Club yesterday at the club's first reception of the season. Here the club's president, Mrs.

Clifford Davis, and Representative Davis of Tennessee (left) greet Senator Tom Connally, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as he goes down the line

Infectious Colds Spreading Here

SPECIAL REPORTS SHOW COLDS ON INCREASE!

As miserable colds continue to spread through many neighborhoods, mothers today are advised to follow these simple health rules:

Live normally. Avoid excesses. Get plenty of rest and sleep. Avoid crowds. And if anyone in your family does catch a cold, always remember...

The best-known home remedy you can use to relieve distress of colds is warming, comforting Vicks VapoRub!

STARTS INSTANTLY... The moment you rub it on throat, chest and back, VapoRub starts right to work to bring relief. It penetrates into upper bronchial tubes with special medicinal vapors. It stimulates chest and back surfaces like a good comforting poultice.

WORKS FOR HOURS... And... VapoRub actually keeps up this wonderful Penetrating-Stimulating action for hours—keeps working to bring relief even while you sleep! It relieves coughs, soothes irritation, and relieves muscular soreness and tightness. Often by morning the worst miseries of the cold are gone!

But remember...you get this special Penetrating-Stimulating action only when you use Vicks VapoRub! So for children and for grown-ups, always be sure you relieve distress of colds with the one and only Vicks VapoRub.

This New Coffee Flavor Makes Early Morning Angels

It turns Bears into Dears...it's a wonderful, wonderful spirit-lifting success

A steaming, fragrant cup of this heavenly new Chase & Sanborn Coffee will bring out the "angel" in any man! "What's in it?" people ask!

The answer is Selecciones (pronounced select-see-oh-nays). That's the Spanish for selected...some coffees selected mainly for perfecting body...others selected mainly for perfecting flavor. Yes, the flavor coffees in this mouth-watering new blend are hand-selected 1, 2, 3—three times!

1. Hand-selected from shade-grown, peed-freed trees.
2. Hand-selected at the peak of ripeness.
3. Hand-selected before and after curing.

No wonder it's so delicious. Try it! If you don't think it's the best coffee you ever tasted, just send us the unused portion and we'll give you double your money back. Get your pound today! (It's vacuum-packed, of course.) And long live your houseful of early morning angels!

The NEW Chase & Sanborn A New Secret Blend "Selecciones"

Ask Anne How to Choose Proper Fabrics

I have recently become interested in sewing wearing apparel for my family. Because I am unfamiliar with the names of different kinds of materials and the types best suited for certain purposes, I am wondering if you or your readers would be able to steer me to a book or pamphlet which would be informative along this line—one which would illustrate the materials, giving name, showing kind of weave, texture and at the same time suggest uses, such as blouses, sport shirts, pajamas, dresses, etc.? A. F. B.

"Fabrics" by Grace G. Denny (published by J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia), includes fabric definitions, simple tests for fiber identification and classification of fabrics based on structure. "A Guide to Textiles," by M. Evans and E. B. McGowan (John Wiley & Sons, Inc.) is a compilation of basic facts concerning textiles for household and clothing purposes presented in dictionary form. Either one of these books would be helpful to you. They can be obtained at libraries and book stores. If your bookstore doesn't have them they will be glad to order them for you.

We have moved recently into a small house and in trying to solve the problem of drawer and storage space we had a Welch-type cabinet made for the dining room. Our original idea was to stain this cupboard (an unfinished pine) to match our cherry drop leaf table. However, we now wonder if it would not be better to keep it in pine and stain the stain on and let it remain on the piece until the depth of tone desired is achieved and then wipe the remaining stain away. When the stain has been allowed to dry thoroughly, you could finish it by giving it several well-rubbed coats of wax or applying two or three coats of shellac, allowing each coat to dry thoroughly before applying the next. When the last coat is dry, rub it down with a heavy cloth which has been dampened with light oil and then touched to powdered pumice in a shallow container. This will give a soft, mellow gleam. When the gloss has been cut, wipe with a clean cloth dampened in oil to remove all pumice from the surface.

Can you tell me whether there is a good method to rebind books at home? I have 20 or 30 volumes from which the covers have been completely or partially torn away. The reading matter itself is undamaged, and I wish to rebind the books myself if at all practicable.

The book, "Bookbinding Made Easy," by Lee M. Klinefelter (Bruce Publishing Co.) will give you a method you can use.

Is it harmful to a baby's skin if his clothes and diapers are washed together in an automatic machine?

H. S.

I can see no reason at all why they should not be washed together, provided, of course, that they are thoroughly washed and colored ones do not fade and discolor the diapers.

A friend of mine uses butter flavoring that is very good to use in baking, but I am unable to buy it at any of the local stores. Could you tell me where this can be purchased?

E. K.

I have not been able to find butter flavoring at retail, wholesale or specialty grocery stores. Do any of our readers know where it can be purchased?

A. S.

Could you recommend a good home cleaning method for rugs? I have a 19 by 11, plain colored broadloom which my two babies manage to spot continuously with mud, food, etc. Have tried various cleaners with no success.

A. S.

It is very difficult to remove spots from a rug which has not been recently cleaned all over without giving it a spotty appearance. Therefore, I would suggest you send the rug to a professional cleaner to have it thoroughly cleaned. Then, when spots appear, you can use a method to remove each spot, thereby keeping the rug clean. Mud is easiest removed if allowed to dry and then taken up by the use of a vacuum sweeper or brush. Greasy spots can be successfully removed if you will immediately scrape off as much grease as possible then rub cornmeal into the spot which has been mixed with carbon tetrachloride. Allow it to remain for 20 minutes or so to absorb fat, then remove with the vacuum cleaner. Sugar and fruit stains can be removed by immediately sponging with warm, clear water.

Could you give me the recipe for chocolate used in making chocolate covered nuts and fruits?

T. R. A.

Use chocolate bits, which are sold for making cookies, semi-sweet chocolate or plain milk chocolate candy bars for dipping nuts and fruits. Place the chocolate in the top of the double boiler to melt. If, when it is melted, it seems too thick, add a little cream.

Monroe's Next Is A Western Movie

By Richard L. Coe

VAUGHN MONROE is what Drew Pearson would call a Tuesday Democrat. Lay it to a back-to-the-earth movement stirring in the big band man who's just nosed Guy Lombardo out of his long-held first place with the country's radio editors.

Vaughn, who's been promoting "Standing Room Only" shouts in front of the Capitol over the weekend, gets around the country in a way that would stagger us stay-at-homes and as a result picked up some paying beds on Mr. Truman.

Out of all the bands which rocketed into the big money during the lush war years, the Monroe outfit is one of the few that not only managed to hold its own, but to forge ahead since. Just playing for dances isn't enough now, says Vaughn.

As a result the next three months will find him on a series of one-night stands from Iowa to Florida. But don't ask him how you manage about clothes that will fit sun and snow climates. He doesn't know either, though he does allow it's swell for the shirt-sellers.

This tour will not take him into dance halls, but as a concert aggregation playing such spots as Nashville's proud War Memorial. He'll include such reasonable classics as "Clair de lune," but he knows the big applause-getters will be the old Western songs, the sort of things us city slickers call and there's a swell role for Walter Brennan.

To prep for this, you'll find the early-morning Monroe on horse-jockey and sport appearances the last one did—got to have time for riding broadcast from Georgetown University (thereby adding to the cutlery collection he's made from his many college appearances) and yesterday he did a look-in on Super Music City's rec. shop ("I never knew record stores were open on Sundays, too," he goggled about the place as he is about leading his band.

1948 wasn't all roses for Monroe and his boys, though. Last fall, Vaughn's longtime partner and associate, Jack Marshard, was killed in an auto accident and Vaughn will always remember his old pal.

apartment with daily excursions to Central Park. The kids, cute and blonde, now have a pup and a painting of this trio was a close pal's highly regarded Christmas gift.

The Massachusetts squire chose his home smartly. Not too far off is his own restaurant, the Meadows, where he always plays a month or six weeks every year, paying himself his own salary.

Marian's husband, though, has one extravagance. He likes owning his own plane, which is hardly the average man's idea of back-to-the-land. He's had a Lodestar since the Cessna he owned when he was here last, but now he's got a new one—a Lockheed 12, nicely fitted up so the whole family can travel. My New England blood cautions him about this extravagance every time I see him, but he's as relaxed about the plane as he is about leading his band.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

State Dept. Reform Acheson Goal

(Editor's Note—Drew Pearson today awards the brass ring, good for a free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, to Dean Acheson, new Secretary of State.)

By Drew Pearson

Dean Acheson, son of the late Episcopal Suffragan Bishop of Connecticut, has followed with reasonable consistency an undeviating but earnest desire to help his country. He has also cherished a desire, ever since he was a young lawyer in Washington, to clean up the horse-and-buggy diplomacy of the State Department.

That ambition probably started 20 years ago when Acheson was the attorney for a progressive diplomat, Prentiss Glibert, who tangled with the striped-pants career boys and was nearly given the gate. Never in his fondest dreams, however, did Dean Acheson, in those youthful days, think that he might become Secretary of State. His real ambition was to sit on the Supreme Court.

The fact that he now finds himself Secretary of State is probably due not only to ability—of which he has plenty—but to an act of kindness to a little man who had just suffered a slashing political defeat.

In November, 1946, Harry Truman's party lost control of both houses of Congress. The blow was so great that most observers predicted Truman could never be re-elected. Some Democrats, especially Senator Fulbright of Arkansas, suggested that Truman resign.

Truman's trip back to Washington from Independence, Mo., where he voted, was almost like a funeral. When he arrived at the Union Station here, only one member of the Cabinet was on hand to meet him, and he wasn't really a member. It was Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Acheson rode with the President back to the White House where Truman read over the single editorial comment and asked Acheson what he should do. Acheson was bold and courageous. He advised Truman to issue a dignified, diplomatic statement urging cooperation between Congress and the White House, pointing to other precedents where Presidents had faced hostile Congresses.

Truman agreed. Acheson drafted the statement—a masterpiece—and the two men have been close friends ever since.

FDR Fired Acheson

Acheson is one of the few men ever fired by Franklin Roosevelt who has staged a comeback.

His mentor throughout the years has been Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, who once taught him law at Harvard, recommended him as secretary to the late Justice Brandeis, and urged FDR to make him Solicitor General.

Instead FDR made Acheson Undersecretary of the Treasury, where he was out-of-step and miserable. Dean was more miserable when, one day while waiting in an anteroom of the White House, newsmen came out to tell him that Roosevelt had just announced his resignation. He did not know until that moment that he had been fired.

Frankfurter Friend

Almost every morning, the long, lanky Acheson can be seen walking 2 miles to work beside his old mentor, Justice Felix Frankfurter. It was Frankfurter who persuaded Roosevelt to take Acheson back seven years later as Assistant Secretary of State, and it was Frankfurter who also urged Acheson to ask the Justice Department to indict this columnist—a proposal which Acheson took up in Cabinet meeting without success.

Acheson first joined the State Department in 1941 as Assistant Secretary in charge of Congressional relations. He was an immediate success. Congressmen like Speaker Sam Rayburn swore by him as their Undersecretary, he ran the State Department during the long periods when Jimmy Byrnes was in Paris, London and Moscow. In that period the State Department probably reached its peak efficiency.

Acheson entered the State Department pro-Russian—that is, in the sense that he felt the United States should do its best to cooperate with Russia, and that the peace of the world depended on the two countries.

It was not long after Potsdam, however, that he began to be disillusioned. Ever since, he has been a consistent, vigorous bitter nonappeaser.

Friend of Hiss

Some Senators will doubtless look askance at Acheson's appointment.

Center Building, Public Library at Mt. Vernon Square, 8th & K Sts. N.W.

TODAY . . . THE HECHT CO. SALUTES

The Washington Public Library

ON THE OCCASION OF ITS GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

● THE PUBLIC LIBRARY . . . on January 10, 1899, loaned its first book from a converted house at 1326 New York Ave. In the fifty years since that date, it has circulated about 75,000,000 books to the homes, offices, and schools of the District and through its reference and advisory service has answered millions of questions and requests for reading guidance. Now, on the golden anniversary of the establishment of this service, the Public Library, through its central building in Mt. Vernon Square and 14 branches, occupies a significant position in the educational, cultural, and recreational life of the community.

● THE PUBLIC LIBRARY . . . Outstanding citizens of the District, appointed by the Commissioners, have served on the Board of Library Trustees. This Board has chosen, in the fifty-year period, 4 chief librarians, who in turn have given distinguished service to the District. 333 full time and 29 part time assistants complete an organization geared to serve the reading and research requirements of District residents.

● THE PUBLIC LIBRARY . . . In addition to its general reference room, serves its adult public through divisions devoted to Art, Business and Economics, Fiction, History-Travel-Biography, Government, Literature (including Foreign Languages), Music, Sociology, Technology-Science, and Local History (Washingtonians). These are the community's informational centers in their respective subjects. Special services include a Consultant in Adult Education, an Adviser to Adults in the Field of Children's Literature, Advisers to Young Adults, and a Director of Group Reading Discussions. There are also collections of music and language records, and mounted pictures.

● THE PUBLIC LIBRARY . . . offers a complete service to the children of Washington. In addition to those who come to the children's rooms individually, more than 20,000 visit the Library annually in school classes. Each year the Public Library also sends over 4,000 sets containing more than 140,000 volumes to 1,227 classrooms, thus bringing a direct service to about 50,000 children.

The Public Library is a vital, dynamic public educational agency. It is, in effect, a cooperative collection of books and other audio-visual material established for the common good. It aids students in their formal education and offers to individuals and groups the means for and guidance in the informal acquisition of knowledge. It acts as a general information bureau and as such it is at the service of the business, political, cultural, educational and social organizations of the community. It is also a recreational agency, because it introduces reading for pleasure to both children and adults. As the physical embodiment of the ideal of free speech guaranteed in the Bill of Rights, by presenting all sides of all questions, it demonstrates the democratic way of life and makes for intelligent and loyal citizenship. For fifty years this institution, staffed by personnel trained not only to select books, periodicals and similar educational tools but especially to see that such materials are made available for the right use at the right time, has served all the people of the District of Columbia. The significance of this service cannot be overestimated. In this world capital, where Federal and even international establishments might tend to overshadow the others, The Hecht Co. feels it most appropriate to recognize a purely local institution. It congratulates the Public Library of the District of Columbia on its Golden Anniversary of service. It congratulates the citizens of the District for the profitable use they have made of their Public Library.

Visit your Public Library this week.
